In a resolution declaring that Atlanta's realty assessments for state and county purposes should be fixed on the same basis with the rest of the state, city council voted unanimously Monday afternoon calling on the board of Fulton county commissioners to reduce its assessment against Atlanta property to 35 per cent of the assessment levied by the city.

At present the city assesses real estate at 70 per cent of its market value, estimated by the tax assessors. This property is accepted for taxation by the county at 70 per cent of the city's assessment, which is approximately 50 per cent of the market value.

By bringing the assessments down to a uniform rate with the average for the rest of the state by accepting Atlanta's request, Fulton county would lose approximately $1,000,000 in annual revenue.

Cut Revenue in Half.
The county rate is the same as the city's—$1.50 on the $100. The county collected about $1,000,000 in taxes on Atlanta realty last year. Under the proposed new plan this source of revenue would be cut in half.

Personal property would not be affected, since both city and county assess at 100 per cent of its estimated value.

The measure asking for a lowering of assessments to a parity with other Georgia counties was introduced by Councilman Edgar Watkins. He stated that the state tax commissioner has reported that it is his practice and purpose to have real estate in the state assessed at 35 per cent of its market value. Mr. Watkins asserted that, in justice and fairness, all taxpayers should obtain uniform treatment.

Councilman Watkins was also the author of a resolution, which council adopted, authorizing and directing the city attorney to prepare the manuscript for publication of a new city code to contain all charter provisions and all ordinances in force up to December 31, 1922. The city laws have not been codified since 1910. Mr. Watkins, Councilman Horace Russell and Councilman Claude Ashley were appointed by the mayor pro tem as a committee to assist in the work.

Change in Street Name.
Mr. Watkins introduced a resolution at the request of property owners, to change the name of Semphill avenue—which is a continuation of Luckie street—to Luckie street. The paper was referred to the street committee.

The probe by Councilman J. A. Couch to find out whether Alderman D. R. Wilder was holding an official position in the state department of agriculture, was dropped by the councilman at the session.
He stated that he had received a letter from Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown informing him that the alderman was not an officeholder with the department and was paid only for the actual time he was employed on work for the department. The councilman had threatened a councilman's investigation.

Council adopted the tax ordinance fixing business and other special licenses for the year. No changes were made from last year except a few revisions that council has voted during the year on some classifications.

Amendments Approved.
The council approved a charter amendment to annex a territory of about 500 acres on Cascade avenue, and a charter amendment to make Kirkwood the new twelfth ward without any revision of her boundaries. Annexation of the Cascade avenue district will bring into the city approximately 1,000 additional inhabitants, it is said.

Famed Judge of Feminine
Fulcrum Gives Twelve Points for 'Perfect Lady.'

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.
United News Staff Correspondent.
New York, June 19.—What constitutes greatness in a woman? The National League of Women Voters wants to know. The league is compiling a list of the twelve greatest women in the United States for a Brazilian journalist. Most of those so far suggested are educators, philanthropists, and suffragists. Only one actress, Maude Adams, has been included.

Florence Ziegfeld, a recognized judge of feminine beauty, has been picking chorus girls for twenty years and though he admits a possible bias in favor of good looks as against brains he insists that his point should not be overruled just because he is a man.

Here is what Ziegfeld says constitutes a great woman:

1. Beauty.
2. Cleanliness.
3. A passionate fondness for dancing.

4. No objection to an occasional cigarette or cocktail.

5. An aversion to high collars and neckties on women.

6. Need know nothing about predestination.

7. A good education.

8. Must not be dull.

9. Should have a sense of humor.

10. Ought to be married and have at least six children.

11. Should use her own name as not to implicate her husband.

12. No-bobbed hair.

"When we think of a great woman, we too often try to set up a man's standard," Ziegfeld said. "But women ought not to be judged on that basis. No woman completely fills her place in life unless she has charm and the qualities I have mentioned are necessary if a woman is to be attractive."

Beauty and Brains.

"And don't think a woman has to be stupid because she is pretty. The ideal woman must be educated because she will never have the proper breadth of view unless she is. But the idea that good looks and brains can't go together is all wrong."

"A woman must have enough of a sense of humor so that she doesn't think all people are damned fools except herself. She ought to get married and have a family, but I don't see why she need drag her husband's name around with her all the time. If she wants to carry her own maiden name after she is married, she ought to be allowed to do so."

Ziegfeld doesn't agree that bobbed hair is necessary to the modern woman.

"Very few of our girls have bobbed hair now," he said. "When they need bobbed hair on the stage, we put wigs on them."

Chicago, June 19.—"Flapperites" is bringing about inefficient sleep, starvation and undernourished physical wrecks among modern city youth, Dr. Clarence Bartlett, president of the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic society, said today in an address before the American homeopathic committee.

Not only were the habits of the flappers assailed, but the methods of enforcement of the Volstead act were characterized as "officialdom gone mad," by Dr. Bartlett.

"On all hands we hear comments of the precocity of the youth of the present day," he declared. "Their flaunting of authority, their hours, their habits as to hygiene, are all made subjects of comment. And we blame them for it. Really it is the parents who are to blame."

Prohibition, he said, "was a great thing from a health standpoint, but the methods of enforcement as applied to medical practice he declared were deserving of the severest criticism because they are oblivious to all medical principles."

"Whisky has been made the standard of alcoholic medication," he said, "when as a matter of fact we must recognize that other and milder al-

Constitution Bureau,

Washington, June 19.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—The action of the republican caucus today in voting, 30 to 9, to delay consideration of the bonus bill until after passage of the tariff is looked upon as a complete triumph for President Harding.

It was the first skirmish the president has had with congress, and the outcome has aroused speculation over his ability to remove the legislative jam now existing at the capitol.

While no details of the caucus have been given out, there are reliable rumors circulating that debate over the question grew very heated. Senator McCumber, chairman of the finance committee and author of the bonus bill, is understood to have yielded his views for immediate consideration of the compensation measure only after a bitter fight, in which he was joined by eight of his colleagues.

Great Secrecy.

Just who were the eight other members of the caucus joining the North Dakota senator is not known. Caucus meetings are occasions for great secrecy, and especially is this true when the matter under consideration involves such a political issue as the bonus.

Although the action of the meeting in following the president's wishes was diametrically opposed to McCumber's plan, it is now conceded that he will not pursue the matter further. Not that he is satisfied with the resolution accepted, but that he is prohibited from opposing the decision from having participated in the caucus. This is one of the staunch rules of all party meetings.

The resolution adopted by the caucus promises to take up the bonus immediately after passage of the tariff, and was proposed as a political document to appease Senator McCumber, as well as an aid to republicans in the primaries. Something of an exposure of this is planned for Tuesday or Wednesday, when democratic senators will move to consider the bonus at once.

The unsettled day is said to be attributed to Senator Harrison's absence, and a request from him that the matter await his return.

Put G. O. P. on Record.

Democratic members, joined by several republican senators who refused to take part in the caucus today, will demand on the floor that the compensation measure be immediately considered. The move will be designed to serve the purpose of putting republicans on record as against early action.

Meanwhile speculation increases on the ability of President Harding to repeat his successes of today in clearing the congressional docket. Observers who have been associated with affairs of the capitol declare that never in the history of congress has there been such a legislative jam.

Three major issues—the tariff, the bonus and the subsidy—are yet to be dealt with by one or both branches of congress. And the appropriations for the most part are yet matters of controversy. Further, the day at the capitol is counted lost when there is no bitter partisan debate to consume time and to complicate business.

Alaska Trip Abandoned.

Such is the jam that the president has definitely abandoned his plans for a trip to Alaska. Mr. Harding has said repeatedly that he would not leave Washington with congress still on the job, and there is no possibility of an adjournment for months.

Republican senators continue to press demands for a cloture rule, and may attempt to bring it up again; but cloture itself would precipitate a filibuster which would consume more time than ordinary discussion requires, and there is no sentiment for its passage.

Senate Centers Trouble.

The main difficulties lie in the senate, it is said. For more than two and a half months the Fordney-Mc-

Movement Started to Reoughfares.

Indorsement of a proposal to name and dedicate the new boulevard soon to be formed of Juniper, Courtland and Washington streets, by the improvement of Courtland street, as a city memorial to the soldiers of Georgia who lost their lives in the world war was made Monday by the Eighty-second division of Atlanta at a luncheon held in the Peacock cafe.

The resolution making this indorsement was passed unanimously by the members of the association following a discussion of plans for a suitable war memorial, and it was decided that the association should suggest an appropriate name for the new boulevard, and participate in its dedication to the sons of Georgia who died for America in the war.

Great Civic Memorial.

Dedication of the new boulevard, which will be second to the Peachtree-Whitehall thoroughfare as a cross-city street, as a great civic memorial to the gold star heroes of Georgia, will follow the completion of the Courtland street repaving and widening project. Juniper and Washington streets are already improved, and with the improvement of Courtland street, the new boulevard will be complete.

Several citizens have recently suggested that the old names of the streets composing the new boulevard be dropped and the entire thoroughfare be named and dedicated as a war memorial by the Eighty-second Division association, composed of Atlanta men who won laurels in the Argonne and on other foreign battlefields.

Many residents of Courtland street have subscribed to the plan and action is now on foot to obtain the assent of Washington and Juniper street residents to the memorial idea. Many residents on all these streets have already given the memorial their hearty indorsement.

Reasons For Indorsement.

The indorsement of the memorial project was made, according to Joseph R. Cooke, vice president of the association, because of the lack of a permanent war memorial in Atlanta, and because members of the association believe that no more fitting tribute to Georgia heroes could be made than by the dedication of the most recently planned cross-city thoroughfare to their memory.

The original motive back of the Courtland street improvement project was the desire to form a thoroughfare connecting north and south Atlanta, and to relieve the present congestion on the downtown streets. A body of Courtland street citizens organized themselves to carry out this project some months ago, and at the

BY JOHN GLEISSNER.
United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 19.—Riding safely at anchor off the Jersey coast lies a fleet of seven vessels, laden with thousands of cases of the choicest foreign liquors, which are destined to be smuggled ashore.

Prohibition enforcement officers know the fleet is there—some of them visited the flagship and talked to the skipper. But they are powerless to do anything more than guard against the landing of the contraband. The fleet is outside the three-mile limit, and the twelve-mile customs limit, and the Volstead law isn't operative there. The smugglers are serenely confident they will dispose of their cargo with little difficulty.

Most of the liquor is from Scotch ports. The cargoes of the seven vessels are valued at around $3,000,000. John D. Appleby, prohibition director for New York and New Jersey, has ordered the prohibition navy to be on the alert. The former submarine chaser Hahn is patrolling the mouth of the harbor, her forward gun ready for action. Smaller craft are guarding the coves and inlets which dot the coast.

Constitution Bureau,

Washington, June 19.—(By Constitution Leased Wire).—A conference between officials of the forestry service and the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, following their return from a tour of the mountains of north Georgia conducted by The Constitution recently, has resulted in an announcement today that a sum of $40,000 will be immediately available for the construction of a highway leading into the Toccoa basin. F. W. Reid, district forester of the forestry service, and one of the government officials on The Constitution tour, made the announcement.

The Toccoa basin is one of the beauty spots of the national forestry reservation in Georgia. In making the tour through that section, Mr. Reid said that department officials were impressed with the necessity of improving road conditions at once, in order that summer campers might not have difficulty in reaching the reserves.

Upon their return to Washington, officials of the two departments, including Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the public roads bureau, found that a sum of $40,000 was immediately available for improvement of forest reserve highways. This fund, although ready for use, is dependent upon state co-operation and assistance in the work, it was explained. Mr. Reid stated, however, that W. R. Neal, of the state highway commission, who was a member of the mountain expedition, expressed at the time his willingness to co-operate to any extent permitted.

Now Open to Public.

Coincident with the announcement, Mr. Reid stated that the forestry bureau was in receipt of a large number of communications from persons living in the section inquiring when the government would officially open up the reserves to campers and outing-goers. In reply to this, the official stated that the forest reserves are now open to the public.

The national forest reserves in north Georgia are open to campers and tourists now, and will be the year round. Anyone has the right to go there and camp for any length of time, with all freedom and without costs," he said.

POLICY REDECLARED

Report Asserts Adminis-

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Cincinnati, June 19.—Opposition to a retail sales tax, with a warning that effort can be expected to have it written into the soldier bonus bill and the redeclaration of a policy opposed to unrestricted immigration marked the action today of the American Federation of Labor convention as it settled down to its final week's work.

By unanimous vote the convention directed officers of the federation to wage the fight against the sales tax with "unabated force," the decision of the delegates coming without debate on the legislative committee's report. The immigration policy provoked only brief discussion.

Administration of the federal budget law also was brought before the convention by the committee report asserting that the budget administrators have prostituted the high purpose of the budget system by using it for "political propaganda."

Report Adopted.

The committee, however, declared in favor of a "satisfactory budget system" and its report was adopted with the provision instructing the federation's executive council to use every "effort to correct glaring administrative defects which are operating to the disadvantage of the present budget system."

Aside from the convention work, interest was centered in a movement to contest the re-election of Frank Morrison as secretary of the federation. Friends of William Clarke, president of the glass workers, were active among the delegates, and Mr. Clarke indicated his willingness to make the race.

Another development outside the convention was the meeting tonight of the federation's special policy committee with a number of lawyers, who were called here to guide the committee in drafting a program for combating the supreme court's recent decision in the Coronado coal case, which held labor unions liable to damages under the Sherman anti-trust law.

Want Speedy Action.

While committee members indicated an intention to favor a report proposing a constitutional amendment permitting a congressional veto of court decisions, their discussion with the lawyers was understood to have centered on what more speedy action, if any, might be proposed for offsetting decisions opposed by organized labor. In this connection, committeemen pointed out that adoption of a constitutional amendment was a slow process, and said if success were ultimately achieved the labor unions might in the meantime be subjected to various suits, based on the Coronado decision.

Several pending bills in congress brought fire from the convention. The Johnson measure providing for registration of immigrants was termed "a legislative absurdity" by the legislative committee, it being contended that the measure would be harmful to labor during industrial disputes by opening a possible avenue for deportation proceedings. A bill permitting fewer seamen and less life-saving equipment was declared to "make drowning easier," as well as being an attack on the seamen's law. A bill permitting removal, without preliminary hearing, of residents of one state wanted to answer charges before federal Trenton, N. J., June 19.—Colonel Marcellus H. Thompson, vice president and active leader of the Auto Ordnance company, of New York, has been indicted by the federal grand jury here on a charge of conspiracy to ship arms to Ireland in violation of the neutrality laws. The announcement was made today by Assistant United States District Attorney Thomas V. Arrowsmith.

Indictments also have been returned against the Auto Ordnance company, and seven other persons on the same charge, as the result of the seizure at Hoboken last June of the Cosmopolitan Line freighter East Side, in the cow bunkers of which were found 459 machine guns. The guns were alleged to have been destined for use by Sinn Feiners in Ireland.

Others Indicted.

The others indicted are: Frank Williams, alias Lawrence De Lacy, alias Lawrence Pierce, who is alleged to have paid for the shipment of guns, and his brother, Fred Williams, alias Edward De Lacy, who is alleged to have been implicated in the purchase of the guns. Both are now believed to be in Ireland; George Gordon Rorke, a salesman of Washington, who is alleged to have placed an order for the guns with the Auto Ordnance company; Frank J. Merkle, secretary of the Auto Ordnance company; Frank B. Ochsener, of New York and Washington, who is accused of placing the first order, for some of the guns with the Auto Ordnance company; John Cullane, a truckman of New York, who is alleged to have carted the guns; A. Murder; Jealousy Cause.

Statesboro, Ga., June 19.—(Special).—Mrs. M. B. Dixon, 38, and her daughter, Mrs. Elliott Padric, both of Dover, were found slain in an automobile near Clito early tonight.

Elliott Padric, minister and husband of the younger victim, according to officers, has confessed to the double murder. Padric was rushed to Augusta for safe-keeping against probable mob violence.

Mrs. Padric and her husband had been separated two months, officials stated. Mrs. Dixon and her daughter met Padric late today at the railroad station in Clito. The three are said to have started to their home in Dover, but after traveling a short distance, returned to Clito, where Padric purchased gasoline for the automobile.

Jealousy Is Cause.

Another start was made. About 6:30 an automobilist discovered the Padric car near a river bridge a short distance from Clito. The car blocked the road, and the switch key had been removed. The body of Mrs. Dixon was in the front seat. A bullet had pierced her heart. Mrs. Padric's body was in the rear of the car. She

ACCUSED MAN'S WIFE
STICKS BY HUSBAND

Mrs. Saggus Formerly Resided in Decatur—Letters Introduced at Hearing Incriminate Couple.

Washington, Ga., June 19.—(Special).—Charges that he had poisoned his wife and Charles W. Wilbanks in order that he alone might possess the latter's wife, with whom he had become infatuated, were emphatically denied and attributed to a "frame-up," born of jealousy, by Dr. J. G. Saggus at the Wilkes county jail tonight, a short time after he had surrendered to authorities.

This statement found ready substantiation from the beautiful Mrs. Saggus, formerly the wife of Wilbanks, at her home in Harlem. But with a coroner's verdict that the physician was guilty of a double murder in their hands, officials lost no time in their preparations to complete their investigations. An order for a post-mortem of the bodies of Wilbanks and the former Mrs. Saggus was obtained, and both will be exhumed tomorrow, according to present plans.

Hearing of the allegations brought against him, Dr. Saggus left his home in Harlem last night. En route to this city, he passed Sheriff George M. Walton, who was going to arrest him. Arriving here, the physician stopped his car in the public square and turning to Detective T. O. Sturdivant, of Atlanta, who submitted a mass of evidence against him at the hearing this morning, said:

Accused Is Arrested.

"Let's have a drink? I'm hot and tired after that ride."

The detective's reply was a notification that he was under arrest. At the jail, Dr. Saggus declared that "this whole affair, which has been stirred up here, is due to some jealousy, or malice, on the part of some one in Wilkes county." He denied all of the charges.

"I don't know the party responsible, but the statement that I was requested to leave this county and make my home elsewhere is a fabrication pure and simple," he said. "People of my community, when they heard I contemplated leaving, almost got on their knees and begged me to continue my residence in Wilkes."

Perhaps, the most damaging evidence submitted to the coroner's jury was that of Rev. J. M. Hawkins, superintendent of the Methodist Orphan's home, in Decatur, and a brother-in-law of Wilbanks. Letters, alleged to have been written by Saggus and his present wife, who was then Mrs. Wilbanks, while the latter was visiting Mr. Hawkins, were placed in evidence. These communications, it was testified, told of Mrs. Wilbanks being in a delicate condition and Dr. Saggus' acknowledgment that he was responsible for this condition. An early meeting was suggested by the physician, it was stated, at which time he would perform an illegal operation.

Denies Writing Letters.

When his attention was called to this particular evidence, Dr. Saggus declared that he knew "nothing of the letters." He announced that he had employed Norman A. Norman, a Washington legal firm, to represent him. Mrs. Saggus' statement was given to a representative of The Atlanta Constitution, who visited her at her home.

know a week before his death that he was going to die at an early date," she declared. "He made all arrangements for the care of his family, and Dr. Saggus was in no way responsible for his death."

Both Dr. and Mrs. Saggus were friends of ours and we resided only a short distance from each other. I did not marry Dr. Saggus until several months after the death of Mr. Wilbanks. For the past ten days my husband has been hearing these reports that he was responsible for the death of his former wife and my former husband, but he gave them no serious consideration, believing that nothing would result from idle gossip.

"When he heard today that he had been charged with murder by the coroner's jury in Washington, he left immediately to surrender to the sheriff," she said.

Mrs. Saggus is recuperating from an operation which was performed two weeks ago. She returned from a hospital yesterday. A short time after Dr. Saggus left his home in Harlem for Washington, the 8-year-old son of Mrs. Saggus fell and broke one of his arms.

Visits Mrs. Wilbanks.
The death of the first Mrs. Saggus occurred November 23, at her home in this county, nine miles from Washington, under circumstances which at that time aroused suspicions of many neighbors, but nothing was done by way of investigation until subsequent events, it is stated, seemed to confirm these suspicions.

Following his wife's death, according to testimony of numerous witnesses before the coroner's jury, Dr. Saggus continued to visit at frequent intervals and pay undue attentions to the wife of Wilbanks. On February 23, Wilbanks was stricken with sudden convulsions very similar to attack which resulted in death of Mrs. Saggus, and he died in rigid convulsion soon after being taken ill, while otherwise apparently in perfect health, it was testified.

Saggus' Home Burns.
After Wilbanks' death, Dr. Saggus and the widow of Wilbanks were married about the middle of May, leaving Wilbanks county and establishing their residence in Harlem. Neighbors of Mr. Saggus went to him before his recent marriage, telling him that his attentions to Mrs. Wilbanks so early after his wife's death were causing much adverse criticism to be directed both to himself and to Mrs. Wilbanks, it was testified. Just as his plans for moving were about completed, Dr. Saggus' home in this county was burned. He collected $5,500 insurance.

With this information in his hands, R. E. Walker, auditor of the Fourth National Bank, Atlanta, a brother of the first Mrs. Saggus, employed Mr.

Sturdivant as a private detective to work on the case. Detective Sturdivant has been on the case for ten days and submitted a volume of evidence consisting of letters which are alleged to have been passed between Mrs. Wilbanks and Dr. Saggus while the former was visiting friends at the Decatur Orphan's home, where, previous to her marriage, she had been employed as a matron, and the sworn testimony of relatives and neighbors of the principal in the alleged murder to the coroner's jury today.

Testimony of Dr. A. W. Simpson and Dr. C. S. Woods brought out before the jury was to the effect that convulsions such as Mrs. Saggus and Mr. Wilbanks were said to have died with, might have been due to other causes, but the symptoms indicated strychnine poisoning. The muscles of both Mrs. Saggus and Mr. Wilbanks were said to have been taut and not to have relaxed after death. Both died it was stated by witnesses, affirming that they were in no pain whatsoever.

"We, the jury, find that Mrs. J. G. Saggus and Charles W. Wilbanks came to their death by poison administered by Dr. J. G. Saggus," read the verdict which was returned in a few minutes.

To Disinter Bodies.
An order from the coroner to disinter the bodies of Mrs. Saggus, near Sandy Cross, in Tallapoosa county, and Wilbanks, in Banks county, near Commerce, was taken and a chemical analysis of the viscera of the two bodies will be undertaken at once to determine whether they show traces of poison.

TO EXHUME BODY OF WILKINSON TODAY.
Commerce, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—The body of Charles W. Wilbanks, who died of poison administered by Dr. J. G. Saggus, formerly of Washington according to a coroner's verdict returned in Wilkes county today, will be exhumed for examination Tuesday.

Wilbanks was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton A. Wilbanks. He was born near New Salem, Ga., in Wilkes county, 34 years ago. He was a member of one of the best families in the county.

The remains of Wilbanks were interred at the home church of Dr. Saggus. He was present at the funeral service. He attended the corpse the previous night. He bought beautiful floral offerings for the deceased.

MRS. SAGGUS ONCE RESIDED IN ROME.
Rome, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Mrs. J. G. Saggus, wife of the Harlem physician who is held on charges of double murder in Washington, Ga., before her marriage to Charles W. Wilbanks was Miss Corrie Johnson, of this city.

She was an orphan and was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson, who reside near here. She was adopted from the Methodist Orphan's home at Decatur and is a relative of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson.

Mrs. Saggus is thirty years of age and a woman of remarkable beauty. Her husband is about 35 years of age.

MRS. WALKER TELLS OF HUSBAND'S SUSPICIONS.
Robert E. Walker, 30 years old, of 48 Highland view, brother of the first Mrs. Saggus, and at whose instance a probe into the two deaths led to the issuance of the murder warrants against Dr. Saggus, was expected to reach Atlanta Monday night from Washington, where he has been since last Friday, personally aiding and conducting the investigation in conjunction with the solicitor-general's office.

The first Mrs. Saggus was Miss Mary Walker and her home was in Barnett, Ga. There were born to her and Dr. Saggus three boys, the oldest being Robert, aged 8, and the others, Harold, 5, and Joe, 1-year-old. The youngest, Joe, was only six months old at the time of his mother's death as the result of poison, it is alleged.

Besides the husband and three children her brother, Robert E. Walker, is the only immediate relative left by the first Mrs. Saggus. He is an auditor in the accounting department of the Fourth National Bank.

Peculiar Circumstances.
Mrs. Walker told a Constitution reporter Monday afternoon that peculiar circumstances surrounding the death of the first Mrs. Saggus and also that of Mr. Wilbanks, followed by the marriage of Mrs. Wilbanks to Dr. Saggus, three months after the death of Mr. Wilbanks, and less than six months after the death of Mrs. Saggus—aroused her husband's suspicions.

The suspicions were shared by neighbors in Washington, Mrs. Walker stated, who carefully watched every movement of Dr. Saggus, culminating in Mr. Walker employing a private detective several weeks ago to thoroughly prove all the details and rumors concerning the alleged double murder.

Hawkins in Washington.
The investigation in progress at Washington is also being attended by Rev. J. M. Hawkins, superintendent of the Decatur Orphan's Home, who is a brother-in-law of Charles Wilbanks, whom Dr. Saggus is charged with having poisoned in order that he might wed Mrs. Wilbanks.

The second Mrs. Saggus, before her marriage to Wilbanks, according to Mrs. Walker, was a Miss Corrie Johnson, of this city. She was a native of Ga. She was a matron for some time prior to her marriage to Mr. Wilbanks, and so engaged at the time she married, it is said.

COBURN MAKES BOND IN CALIFORNIA COURT.
Los Angeles, June 19.—William S. Coburn, former grand go-blin of the K. K. K. Klan, has been confined to $5,000 lat. today for appearance and indictment charging him and 36 other alleged members with felony in connection with a raid at Inglewood, Cal., last week, at which time, who took the bond, had just previously issued an order increasing the bail of $5,000 of the other defendants from $300 to $1,000. The judge stated in the order that "good cause" had been shown the court for regarding the $500 security as "inadequate."

The remaining defendant, Klegle Nathan, a Klansman, has been confined in the county jail since his arraignment last week, having been unable to raise $5,000 bail.

Judge Houston yesterday increased Coburn's bail from $1,000 to $5,000 this morning, when the ex-grand go-blin appeared to plead. Coburn arrived here earlier in the day from Atlanta, Ga., where he had been in conference with Klan leaders at the organization's national headquarters.

ALLEGED FORGER JAILED IN CHICAGO ON LOCAL CHARGE.
Notice was received in Atlanta yesterday of the arrest in Chicago of Comer Rowell, who is wanted in this city on a charge of forgery, having been indicted by the grand jury last week.

It is claimed that Rowell learned that another man had been sent a money order to the Western Union and that he forged the name of the addressee and obtained the money. The sum involved was said to be approximately $150.

Chief Lowry stated Monday night that he would start a man for Chicago Tuesday to bring back the prisoner.

Clever Scheme Charged.
Montgomery, Ala., June 19.—Comer Rowell, a young white man of Elba, Ala., is in jail in Chicago charged with being the "flim-flam" man who has been fleecing Alabama people through "phony" distress telephone calls. The information that he is under arrest is contained in a telegram to Chief of Police Taylor from Chief of Detectives Hughes, of Chicago. The telegram was received by Chief Taylor this afternoon.

Telephone requests for money have been recently received by several persons in Montgomery and other parts of Alabama from a mysterious man who generally, it is claimed, represented himself as well-known Elba citizens or their relatives.

These telephone messages have extended from local calls to communications from cities in far-away parts of the country. He asked that money be transmitted by telegraph. The first of the series of "flim-flam" operations reported in Montgomery occurred about seven weeks ago, according to information available. On that occasion a man, whom it later became known, misrepresented his identity, was successful in getting a check for $35 cashed.

Rowell is also wanted by the authorities in Atlanta, Ga.

Richmond Greeted Thin Gray Line Of Dixie Heroes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Richmond, Va., June 19.—Re-living in memory the hopes and fears of '61 and '62, Richmond today opened wide her gates and with love and admiration welcomed the surviving band of gray-coated men, who by their valor, made immortal the armies of Lee and Jackson.

Hundreds who rallied about the brilliant Stuart, who charged with the gallant Forrest, some who trailed with the dashing Mosby; others who were the gray navy's seamen—who drew sabres, shouldered musket, and cannon under the leadership of famous southern chieftains, are assembled here for the thirty-second annual reunion of the Union Confederate veterans.

From the green hills of Maryland and the purple valleys of Virginia, from the yellow sands of Texas plains, from the Gulf waters and even from the shores of the far Pacific they have come together again to worship at the shrine of an unforgetting cause—in the city that once was their beloved capital and the heart of an ever-to-be-remembered confederacy.

50,000 Visitors.
The silent woods and fields in and about the historic city, which once were loud with strife, today are alive with the voices of this fast-thinning band. Slow treading, bent with age and touched to gray by the hand of time, some so frail they cannot walk, others with eyes so dim they can barely see, their diminishing ranks now numbering not more than 4,000, are reuniting and living again in comradeship and ties hallowed by sacred recollections. That gallant army of 500,000 men that followed the Stars and Bars 60 years ago has lessened and lessened in number with the passing years until their ranks have become as elusive as a far spangle dimly pencilled on the sky of the present.

With the old soldiers, their families and their friends, today are gathered in Richmond today is host to approximately 50,000 visitors. The reunion will not officially open until tomorrow morning.

It is the meaning the grizzled veterans are being quartered in Richmond homes where every attention and loving care is being extended. Younger visitors are being lodged in hotels and public buildings. In the latter, hundreds of army cots, loaned by the war department, have been provided.

Opening Sessions.
Late today the program of reunion week opened with the annual convention of the Confederate Southern Memorial association, followed tonight by the opening of the yearly sessions of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

At the meeting of the Sons the sponsors, maids of honor, and chaplains were presented by Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi. Addresses of welcome on behalf of Virginia and the city of Richmond were delivered by Governor Trimble and Mayor Ainslie, respectively. The memorial association's meeting was taken up with committee reports and routine matters.

With the city in a gay, but reverent mood, every building is splashed with bunting and flags—eloquent in color and sentiment. On Monument avenue veterans and visitors are strolling about the great statues of Davis, Lee, Jackson, Stuart and Hill, Jackson's figure, sombre and majestic as a cathedral; Lee's patrician and noble, and stainless as a saint's.

Not far away legions of the confederate dead sleep row on row in their woodland resting places in famous Hollywood cemetery. As if to commune with comrades who more than a half century ago entered the portals of death, gray-coated veterans are seen strolling about the simply-marked graves. Shrunk bodies and withered hands, faces wan and wrinkled as old parchment, they stand silently beside the mounds which to them are as sacred as an unvoiced prayer.

With bowed heads and reverent gestures, it is as if their thoughts were turned to the lines of Virginia Frazer Boyle, poet-laureate of the United Confederate veterans:

"Sing low, Oh voices singing in the Silence
Breath low, Oh prayer of faith upon the sod,
For we are calling, calling in our sadness
Dear souls that went to God."

Trains Pour In.
Last night and today special trains from every state in the south were arriving with members of veterans camps, maids and sponsors and veterans' families and friends. Busy scenes were enacted at the railroad stations as the old soldiers disembarked. Tattered and torn battle flags were unfurled, sabre and saddle and ancient musket were taken from sacred places. In a number of instances veterans came wearing the grey clothes with which they went into battle 60 years ago.

Against the background of white-haired old warriors are the fresh faces and forms of the maids of honor and sponsors, flowers of the younger generation of the south's womanhood, come to honor the memory of the dead and pay tender tribute to the living.

$3,000 DAMAGE DONE NEW APARTMENT HOUSE.
Fire, originating in the basement from undetermined causes, caused between $3,000 and $5,000 damage to the recently constructed three-story apartment at 83 Juniper street shortly after 10 o'clock Monday night. The structure was completely only last week and was unoccupied. It belonged to Mrs. L. T. Whitlock, of 1922 Juniper street. Firemen were unable to discover the cause of the conflagration.

GRIFFIN MAN REPORTS POCKETS ARE PICKED.
F. F. Pastore, of Griffin, Ga., reported to police at midnight Monday that his pockets containing $47 in currency had been picked a short time before at the Terminal station. Pastore stated he missed the money a few minutes after a man had stumbled into him, apparently from over-balance. The stranger, he said, threw out his arms and caught hold of him in his effort to keep from falling. Apologizing for his clumsiness the man quickly recovered his balance and hurriedly walked away.

On reaching the Ogeechee river bridge, Padric says his jealousy over his wife's alleged attentions to other men got the best of him. The Wear Is In A Roof—Not On It

The service you get from asphalt roofing depends on the toughness and durability of the impregnated felt that gives it body and strength. A roof doesn't wear down; it wears out.

Long life is built into Flex-a-Tile Roofing, FELT FIRST. Felt-making is an art in itself—an art that more than 50 years of Richardson experience has reduced to a science.

In Flex-a-Tile Shingle Roll Roofing you get the very best grade of slate-surface roll roofing with an unusual added feature—the appearance of individual Giant Shingles, molded on. Shingle Roll gives the beauty of an asphalt shingle roof at less than half its cost.

FLEX-A-TILE HOUSE TOPS

The double coating of crushed slate from our own quarries at Flex-a-Tile, Georgia, furnishes a rich coloring of natural green (or red if you prefer), adds to the looks of the roof and carries the approval of the Fire Underwriters Laboratories as a fire-resisting roof covering.

Flex-a-Tile Shingle Roll Roofing can be laid right over old wood shingles by anyone who is handy with tools. It lies flat and stays flat.

Frank Jones, Accused Of Shooting Officer, Held Under $5,000 Bond

Frank Jones, alias Abe Leonard, negro, charged with shooting Officer C. R. Herndon, February 11, was bound over to the superior court Monday under $5,000 bond by Recorder George E. Johnson. He is charged with assault with intent to murder.

City Detective E. M. Cason appeared to prosecute the negro, and informed the court of an alleged confession the negro is said to have made to the detectives, concerning the shooting of Officer Herndon, and also the shooting of another officer in Montgomery, Ala., several months ago.

Jones, alias Leonard, was finally captured by Supernumerary Police Officer Ginn at West Fair street and the railroad, after an exciting chase through downtown streets from Whitehall and Garrett streets, where he first attempted to arrest the negro. At the time of his arrest, he is said to have shot Officer Herndon, was taken from him by Officer Ginn.

Another negro, Pitts Burdette, arraigned before the recorder under charges of robbery, was held under a $1,000 bond, for trial in the state courts. He is accused of robbing the store of the Empire Clothing company, 70 South Broad street, and the Rhodes-Wood Furniture company, at Whitehall and Mitchell streets.

ASK REMOVAL OF COMMISSIONER TO BRAZIL SHOW

Washington, June 19.—A resolution censuring Commissioner Frank A. Harrison, of Lincoln, Neb., for "falsifying the records of the commission" was adopted unanimously by members of the American commission to the Brazilian centennial exhibition at a meeting today. Later members of the commission called upon President Harding at the white house, submitted the resolution and requested that he remove Mr. Harrison as a member of the commission.

No announcement was made from the white house as to what action the president might take and members of the commission, beyond issuing a brief, formal statement, declined to discuss the case or the character of the charges in any way. Members present when the vote was taken were said to be D. C. Collier, of Santa Fe, New Mexico, commissioner general, and Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, New York City; W. G. Stevens, Rio de Janeiro; John K. Kirby, of Houston, Tex., and George T. Mills, secretary of the commission.

In a telegram sent to The New York World last night, E. Y. Clarke, imperial wizard, pro tem, of the Ku Klux Klan, denied the published statement that he was connected with the Great American Fraternity. "The charge," he wired, "is false in every particular, as I have no connection whatever with the Great American Fraternity. I have no knowledge whatsoever of its plans or purposes, and do not know who composes its board of directors or the names of the men who organized the fraternity."

In answer to the statement given out by the committee on church co-operation last Saturday, which without mentioning names, apparently was referring to the Klan, and which scored religious intolerance and cases of intimidation and violence, Mr. Clarke denied that the churches of Atlanta have united or are uniting against the Klan.

"The committee on church co-operation of the Atlanta Ministers association," he stated, "made fruitless and ineffective attack on the Ku Klux Klan about one year ago and the present attack of this committee on the Klan has not created a ripple in the mind of the public in Atlanta. The committee does not speak for more than 10 per cent of the ministers of Atlanta."

Use of Glands.

Dr. Roy Upham, of Brooklyn, president of the homopathists, announced in an address that an invitation had been issued to Dr. Victor D. Lespinasse, noted gland expert, to appear before the convention and discuss an operation he was reported to have performed a few days ago on Harold F. McCormick, chairman of the executive committee of the International Harvester company. He said that while details as to the exact nature of the operation were unknown the homopathists were very anxious from a professional standpoint to hear details of it because of its apparent success.

In his talk, Dr. Upham told of the steps made lately in the use of glands of animals in rejuvenating human beings. By the simple process of feeding a patient or by injecting into his veins, the extracts of the various glands of animals, one who is lazy may be made a prize student, Dr. Upham declared.

"The transplantation of glands and the injection of the extracts from them into human beings is beyond the realm of the imagination," he said. "Success has been proved. It has been discovered that if the extract of the suprarenal gland of a goat is placed in a patient, he fed or injected hypodermically into a last person he or she will become immediately the personification of energy, ambition and industry."

NEW BOULEVARD TO BE MEMORIAL

present time the improvement is a practical certainty. Members of this Courtland street body announced Monday that since their plans had now assumed a civic and patriotic aspect work for their success would be redoubled.

No other permanent war memorial has so far been proposed, according to Mr. Cook, and he declared himself confident of the success of the memorial idea. "Atlanta is one of the few cities that lack a war memorial," said Mr. Cook, "and I believe that we should have something to remind future generations of those sons of Georgia who upheld the old southern tradition of valor in the Argonne, at the battle of the Meuse and on the banks of the Marne."

Will Cost Nothing.

Scott Chandler, of the executive committee of the association, declared that one of the chief merits of the plan was that it would cost nothing to adopt. "And yet," he said, "if we spent a hundred thousand dollars we could erect no more fitting memorial to our soldier dead."

The resolution, in full, follows:

Whereas certain citizens propose to widen and connect Courtland and Washington streets so as to form a boulevard, and

Whereas, the eighty-second division of Atlanta has been requested, in the event this civic improvement is made, to give a name to the proposed boulevard, and to participate in its dedication as a memorial to the soldiers who died in the great sacrifice in the world war, and

Whereas, Atlanta is one of the few large cities without a similar war memorial,

Be it resolved by the Eighty-second Division Association that it is the duty of the association to support the plan, and to hereby express its appreciation of this offer, and does endorse the general plan which has been proposed, and does hereby agree to participate in the dedication exercises.

Whereas, the association is of the opinion that the association should be organized to support the plan, and to hereby express its appreciation of this offer, and does endorse the general plan which has been proposed, and does hereby agree to participate in the dedication exercises.

DR. H. C. WHITE.

This is commencement week at the University of Georgia; and this is "alumni day"—when the boys of former classes gather to renew al-ligances to their Alma Mater, and to live over again their happy college days, always memorable, and always revered.

But this week and this day are of peculiar interest to the university

boys of yesterday, yea for two generations back, for it marks Dr. Henry Clay White's fiftieth anniversary as a professor of a faculty that has undergone many changes in the half century of his unbroken service; and yet has held steadfastly to its anchorage—welded as has been its chain of a half century of service to a link that time has not twisted, and the storms of the passing years have failed to warp.

For "Harry" White—professor of chemistry at Georgia uninterruptedly

since 1872—is to be today the golden hero of a golden celebration in which not only the alumni, but the gray haired veteran of the early

70's to the stalwart youth of '22, are to take part by voice and pen, but in which all the people of Georgia, and thousands throughout the world, will heartily rejoice.

Fifty years is a long time in the span of life.

Men are born, reach high pinna-cles of usefulness and pass on to their eternal rewards in that unit of time.

How fitting it is then that one whom God has spared to serve so well and so long—to reach the highest summit of that success which is measured only by usefulness service—

—should today be so signally honored by the sons and fathers and grandfathers who have learned wisdom at his feet; and who love him with those deep and sincere devotions that have been inspired by the radiance of his unblemished

character, the force of his towering intellect and the personal touch of his unrestrained sympathy.

It is a unique tribute that the Georgia alumni will present to Dr.

White, as a token of their esteem.

It is not of gold, but it is more precious than gold—

A volume of personal letters, hundreds of them, written from the hearts of the hundreds of Georgia men who have passed through the portals of the University during the half century of his service, and who today fill places of trust and responsibility, in the professions and in business, throughout this and the other states of the American union.

It is a compliment that stands perhaps as unprecedented as does the long and unbroken service of the recipient; and its worth to this great educator and Georgian will be more priceless than any gift of intrinsic value could possibly be.

The great advances made in world progress in the half century have revolved around the development of the sciences; and yet Dr.

White has been infinitely more than an instructor in any one branch of a college curriculum.

As a scientist whose contributions have taken high rank in the world of letters he has been conspicuous in leadership in this country and Europe; and he is today an honorary member of many societies and academies of science in Great Britain, France and Belgium.

Perhaps next to his professional work has been his service to agricultural development in the South,

he having become active in that branch of service in the trying years of reconstruction following the period of reconstruction after the civil war.

A clear-sighted vision of commercial fertilization was first given to the south through his own experiments, and he became the father

This Great Old World.

Peace or pain—this old world.

Always half-bad from plain to steep.

Spring or winter—this old world.

Good enough for them that's in it.

Grief may come, a peace may leave us—

Them we like an' love, deceive us.

But you'll find us still a-goin'—

Plottin'—Plannin'—repeenin'—savin'!

Here's the lesson, ever minute:

World's good for them that's in it!

Word From Brother Williams.

De devil ain't gwine ter have much what all time a-busin' him in dis one.

De safe plan, w'en farces de devil

One time I thought Tribulation was all wrong, but I has seen it make new people out o' folks; yit, I wish

some o' em it took sich a long time

dat Tribulation himself got all tired

The Cautious Poet.

A rural singer hands us this one—

"I never sing of springtime.

The blossom on de bough,

An' mockin'birds a-singin'.

The best that they know how,

Because I fear some day de

World'll put me at de plow."

They'll fill the bill for singin'—

The glad birds a-singin'.

I'm only like a jaybird.

A-rainin' of a row.

I jes' don't take no chances.

I wuzn't born to plow!"

Uncle John's Sentiments.

"Uncle John," of the Excelsior

Spring, says "right out in this prose-poem—

"When woman, lovely woman, don't appreciate her charms, and tries, by sick devices, to improve 'em, a feller may be dippy, with the pay in his arms, but it's hard for any honest chap to love 'em. A woman may be studied with a costly lot of gems,

in her ears and on her neck, and in her hair, but the average feller never sees beyond the diamonds, he seldom prances down the avenue, a floating jewel-strewn, attracting every burglar with her glitter, it may be she's an angel of the first degree or more, but it's plain to see, the giddy-bug has bit her. I raises my hat to beauty in any safe or place, regardless of the effort at improvement, but lots of times, I've noticed that a diamond-studded case is built around a seven-jewel morose."

The Uneducated Mule.

Here's an "Early Morning Observation" from Colonel George Bailey—

"As much as we believe in education, we are bound to say that we never heard a ploughman speakin'

a mile in Latin or Greek. Of course, it might have been out of consideration for the lowly mule's lack of school advantages in its youth."

The Boys' Experience Meeting.

It's mighty good, let loose from school,

Across green meadows skimm'ing!

The only time I'm feelin' cool.

Is when I'm tripped for swimmin'!

fires him."

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM READY, M. D.

(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

X-RAY FOR INFECTED TONSILS.

According to a recent report by Dr.

W. D. Witherby, X-ray treatment of infected tonsils and adenoids is not only safe and permanent in effect, but will more thoroughly eradicate the infection than will surgical extirpation of the tonsils and adenoids, the eradication of the infection being accomplished by very small doses of X-ray treated at two-week intervals, and eight treatments in the average case.

Dr. Witherby remarks that the tonsil

(and adenoid) tissue is lymphatic in nature, and this lymphatic tissue is an embryonic tissue which is readily caused to shrink or atrophy by

X-rays.

This shrinkage of the over-grown tonsil tissue is a natural drainage of the crypts in which the well-known strepto-cocci lurks. Aha, it is I, not Witherby, who brings this horrible accusation against the germ! The link in the chain, the tonsil, not on the surface. There is probably nothing to be gained by using antiseptic substances in gargles,

for far as infected tonsils are concerned, the germs cannot be reached by an antiseptic. They lurk within the crypts which are long, deep and in hypertrophied or enlarged or old shrunken tonsils, fortunately, so that even the physician or specialist can not follow the villainous streptococci

to their lairs and threaten them to a permeable bath. The anxious parent

hake a distinction between streptococci

lurking in the tonsils or in the tonsils or in the tooth sockets and vague microbes "lurking" under the surface of the tonsils in the dark house; the germs in the tonsils may at any time find their way to the heart

valves, to the joints, to the gall sac, to the appendix and cause a lot of trouble, whereas any microbes that may possibly hang about the dark corners or hide under the sofa will do nobody harm. To kill the "lurking" microbes vagabonds (in imagination)

by the use of some scarlet-hued notion is quite a touch of a popular pastime

with some housewives.

Out of 38 cases of infected tonsils

in which the X-ray treatment had been employed, 32 showed an absence of the streptococci and the staphylococci as well. Dr. Witherby omits to mention what the other four cases showed,

but it is safe to assume they were not freed from infection by the X-ray treatments.

From this and other reports of the

X-ray treatment of infected tonsils and adenoids, I should say that X-ray treatment is practical

as safe as surgical excision or enucleation and when time and expense are not important factors, the

X-ray treatment might be chosen as the preferable method in certain cases. Assume this method proves successful in half the cases treated,

and the rest of the time they are subjected to surgical treatment after all the X-ray method is still worth the trial in many cases in which there is a temporary or permanent emurgence on operation. Even though X-ray treatment proves entirely satisfactory and ride the tonsils and adenoids

of the lurking germs, the patient still has his tonsils and adenoids, and they are none too sound at that.

Impossible conditions No. 1.

OFFICER SHOOTS; ARREST FOLLOWS

Moultrie, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) William Henry, town marshal at Sale City, was arrested today on a charge of assault with intent to murder as the result of shooting E. B. McDaniel Sunday afternoon. The warrant was sworn out by Mrs. McDaniel. McDaniel is said to be in a critical condition and was carried to Albany late today for treatment. Henry has been released under bond.

According to the version of the incident received here, McDaniel was drinking heavily and had been warned by Marshal Henry to go home. He refused and the shooting followed an attempt to place him under arrest. Henry claimed he had to shoot to save himself.

A similar shooting affair occurred at Coolidge, near here, a short time ago. In that instance Marshal Sheffield was shot to death by Bonnie Hart, who fled following the homicide and still is at large.

Savannah, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) W. C. Parrell was bound over today to the superior court on a charge of murder in connection with the killing of L. E. The alleged attack occurred Friday, Sunday afternoon the young girl and her father were en route to a hospital, where the former was being taken for treatment. Suddenly she pointed toward Harris, crying, "there's the man now."

Harris was arrested immediately by the sheriff. Following threats of mob violence this afternoon the officer placed the prisoner in an automobile and left for Atlanta.

A determined effort is being made by Savannah to induce Judge Barrett to take up his official residence in that city.

Americus, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Judge E. L. Rainey, a member of the prison commission, requested the solicitor-general to take this action, after complaint had reached the commission concerning the circumstances surrounding the negro's death. John B. Ansley, county road superintendent, who is in charge of the chain gang asserts Montgomery died of natural causes, which statement is borne out by physicians who attended the negro.

He was sent up from Sumter superior court on a liquor charge, and died soon after reaching the chain gang.

SHURLEY CONDUCTING EMERGENCY COURT

Judge E. T. Shurley, of Warren, is presiding in an emergency division of Fulton superior court, in an effort to help clear the criminal docket. Judge John D. Search of Gantt Office and Home Ends in Failure Federal circles were stirred Monday when the office and residence of Attorney D. J. Gantt, former supervising federal prohibition agent for the southeast were searched for guns and pistols seized in liquor raids during his administration, and for supplies of various government forms and blanks.

The search was made early Monday afternoon under authority of a warrant issued by Commissioner Colquitt Carter to George Z. Golding, an investigator of the intelligence unit of the internal revenue department at Washington, who took an oath that he had reason to believe and did believe that supplies of weapons were being concealed by the former prohibition official.

The search was fruitless, as far as weapons were concerned, the presence of a few government blanks in his office was explained by Attorney Gantt.

"Attempt to Discredit." "It is only part of an attempt by certain interests to discredit various officials of the former administration," Attorney Gantt stated.

Other former federal officials charged that Golding had opened temporary offices in Atlanta for the sole purpose of gathering information which would discredit several men who held office under the democratic regime.

Investigator Golding established temporary offices on the second floor of the federal building a few days ago. His inquiries have been of a secret nature at all times.

In his complaint to Commissioner Carter, Golding is said to have alleged that a large number of guns have been recovered from former prohibition agents who stated that they had been seized in liquor raids and that Gantt had been given to him by them.

T. B. Harris, of Fayetteville, a former prohibition agent, is said to have made affidavit to the effect that a gun which he gave into the custody of Golding had been given to him by Gantt.

Gantt Denies Charges. The former supervising agent denied Monday afternoon that he had at any time given seized guns away.

"It is true that in some instances the office loaned unclaimed seized guns to agents when they actually needed them, but the guns were never given away," Attorney Gantt said.

"We certainly intended to provide the force with proper means of self-protection, and the grade of guns issued by the department were not altogether of a satisfactory type."

Investigator Golding and an assistant executed the warrant at Attorney Gantt's office. Every corner of the office was searched. About 35 large franked envelopes bearing the card of the internal revenue department were discovered by the investigator.

Attorney Gantt afterwards explained that the envelopes had been sent to the office for the use of his partner, A. O. Blacklock, former internal revenue collector, for the purpose of forwarding to Collector J. T. Rose any mail received at Attorney Blacklock's office through error.

Blacks are Explained. "Mr. Blacklock constantly receives mail intended for the collector's office," Attorney Gantt said, "and for that reason Collector Rose sent us those large envelopes so we could forward any mail meant for the collector to him."

The search warrant for the residence of Attorney Gantt at 882 West Peachtree was executed by Deputy United States Marshals Bishop and Adair. They reported that nothing was found.

District Attorney Clint W. Hager stated Monday afternoon that the investigation was entirely independent of the activities of his office. He said that he was not aware of its existence until Monday.

ALLEGED CONFEDERATE OF KIMBALL JAILED

Columbus, Ga., June 19.—Two men are behind the bars in the Muscogee county jail today awaiting the meeting of the Muscogee county grand jury Wednesday afternoon, which has been called to special session by Solicitor-General C. Frank McLaughlin to consider evidence against them in connection with the bombing of the home of Mayor J. Homer Dimon and sending of anonymous letters to city officials.

One of the men is Sergeant J. B. Kimball, and the other prisoner's name is being withheld by the solicitor. Whether the latter is to face trial in the superior court, depends on the action of the grand jury, while Sergeant Kimball will be given a preliminary hearing before Recorder Flournoy tomorrow morning. Provided the preliminary hearing of the soldier does not find it advisable to hold him to a higher court, then action by the grand jury will be asked, according to the authorities.

In his announcement that he had called the special session of the grand jury, Solicitor-General McLaughlin declared:

"The grand jury will make a thorough and exhaustive investigation into every phase of the bombing of Mayor Dimon's home. If necessary the body will meet from day to day for an indefinite period of time to secure every possible detail in connection with the affair and bring to justice the persons guilty of the outrage."

"I am devoting practically all my time to the investigation of the bombing, and a great deal of evidence has been secured. This will be submitted to the grand jury, and we intend to make a long and continuous probe in an effort to clear up the situation."

"Great guns! The low-down, mean, sneaky!" said Randerson. His eyes were glowing; his words came with difficulty through his straightened lips.

"Masten wouldn't take it up, he told Pickett," went on Uncle Jepson. "He's put it up to you. An' when you'd tackle Pickett about it, Pickett would shoot you. If they was any chance for Chavis to help along, he'd do it. But mostly, Pickett was to do the job. I caltate that's about all—except that I layed for you an' told you to look out."

"You heard this talk after—after Pickett had—"
"Of course," growled Uncle Jepson. "Sure—of course," agreed Randerson. He was grim-eyed; there was cold contempt in the twist of his lips. He sat for a long time, silent, staring out through the door, Uncle Jepson watching him, subdued by the look in his eyes.

When he spoke at last, there was a cold, bitter humor in his voice. "So that's Willard's measure!" he said. "He grades up like a side-wheel on a high-wheel—there's nothin' clean about him but his clothes. But he's playing a game—him an' Chavis. An' I'm the guy they're after! He laughed, and Uncle Jepson shivered. "She's seen one killin', an' I reckon, if she stays here a while longer, she'll see another: Chavis." He stopped and then went on: "Why, I reckon Chavis dyin' wouldn't make no more impression on her than Pickett dyin'. But I reckon she thinks a heap of Willard, don't she, Uncle Jep?"

"If a girl promises—" began Uncle Jepson.
"I reckon—" interrupted Randerson. And then he shut his lips and looked grimly out at the horses in the corral.

"Do you reckon she'd—" Randerson began again, after a short silence. "No," he answered the question himself. "I reckon if you'd tell her she wouldn't believe you. No good woman will believe anything bad about the man she loves—or thinks she loves. But Willard—"

He got up, walked out the door, mounted Patches and rode away. Going to the door, Uncle Jepson watched him until he faded into the shimmering sunshine of the plains.
"I caltate that Willard—" But he, too, left his speech unfinished.

CHAPTER IX.

As Randerson rode Patches through the break in the canyon wall in the afternoon of a day about a week after his talk with Uncle Jepson in the bunk house, he was thinking of the visit he intended to make. He had delayed it long. He had not seen Abe Catherston since taking his new job.

"I reckon he'll think I'm right unneighborly," he said to himself as he rode.
When he reached the nester's cabin, the dog Nig greeted him with vociferous affection, bringing Hagar to the door.

"Oh, it's Rex!" cried the girl delightedly. And then, reproachfully: "Me an' dad allowed you wasn't comin' any more!"

"You and dad was a heap mistaken, then," he grinned as he dismounted and trailed the reins over the pony's head. "I've had a heap to 'tend to," he added, as he stepped on the porch and came to a halt, looking at her. "Why I reckon the little kid in the house ain't here any more!" he said, his eyes alight with admiration, as he critically examined the garments from the distance that separated her from him—a neat house-dress of striped gingham, high at the throat, the bottom hem reaching below her shoulders; a loose-fitting apron over the dress drawn tightly at the waist, giving her figure graceful curves.

He had never thought of Hagar in connection with beauty; he had been sorry for her, pitying her, she had been a child upon whom he had bestowed much of the unselfish devotion of his heart; indeed, there had been times when it had assumed a practical turn, and through various means most of his wages had been delicately forced upon the nester. It had not always been wisely expended, for he knew that Catherston drank deeply at times.

Now, however, Randerson realized that the years must inevitably make a change in Hagar. That glimpse he had had of her on the Flying W ranch house porch had made him think, but her appearance now caused him to think more deeply. It made a constraint come into his manner.

"I reckon your dad ain't anywhere around?" he said.
"Dad's huntin' up some cattle this mornin'," she told him. "Shucks," she added, seeing him hesitate, "ain't you comin' in?"

"Why, I've been wonderin'," and he grinned guiltily, "whether it'd be exactly proper. You see, there was a time when I busted right in the house without waitin' for an invitation, tickled to get a chance to dawdle a kid on my knee. But I reckon them dawdle days is over. I wouldn't think of tryin' to dawdle a woman on my knee. But if you think that you'll still Hagar Catherston an' you won't be dead set on me dawdlin' you—why, shucks, I reckon I'm talkin' like a fool!"

She blushed, and he marveled over it. And while they talked he studied her, noting that her color was higher than he had ever seen it, that the frank expression of her eyes had somehow changed—there was a glow in them, deep, abiding, embarrassed. They dropped from his when he tried to hold her gaze. He had always admired the frank directness of them—that told of unconsciousness of sex, of unquestioning trust.

Today, it seemed to him, there was subtle knowledge in those eyes. He was puzzled and disappointed. And when, half an hour later, he took his leave after telling her that he would come again, to see her "dad," he took her by the shoulders and forced her to look into his eyes. His own searchers narrowed. It was as in the old days—in his eyes she was still a child.

"I reckon I won't kiss you no more, Hagar," he said. "You ain't a kid no more, an' it wouldn't be square. Seventeen is an awful old age, ain't it?"

And then he mounted and rode down the trail, still puzzled over the lurking deep glow in her eyes.

"I reckon I ain't no expert on women's eyes," he said, as he rode. "But Hagar's—there's somethin' gone out of them."

He could not have reached the break in the canyon leading to the plains above the river, when Willard Masten loped his horse toward the Catherston cabin from the opposite direction.

Hagar was standing on the porch when he came, and her face flooded with color when she saw him. She stood, her eyes drooping with any embarrassment as Masten dismounted and approached her. And then, as his arm went around her waist, familiarly, he whispered:

"How is my little woman, today?" She straightened and looked up at him, perplexity in her eyes.

"Hex Randerson was just byeh," she said. "I wanted to tell him about you wantin' me to marry you. But I thought of what you told me, an' I didn't. Do you sure reckon he'd kill you, if he knowed?"

"He certainly would," declared Masten, earnestly. "No one—not even you father—must know that I come here to see you."

"I reckon I won't tell. But Miss Ruth? Are you sure she don't care for you any more?"

"Well," he lied glibly; "she has broken our engagement. But if she knew that I come here to see you, she'd be jealous, you know. So it's better not to tell her. If you do tell her, I'll stop somin'." he threatened.

"It's hard to keep from tellin' folks how happy I am," she said. "Once, I was afraid Hex Randerson could see it in my eyes—when he took hold of my arms lyin' an' looked at me."

Masten looked jealously at her. "Looked at you, eh?" he said. "Are you sure he didn't try to do anything else—didn't do anything else? Like kissing you, for instance?"

"I'm certain sure," she replied, looking straight at him. "He used to kiss me. But he says I'm a woman now, an' it wouldn't be square to kiss me any more." Her eyes had dropped from his. "An' I reckon that's right, too, ain't it?" She looked up again, not receiving an answer.

"Why, how red your face is!" she exclaimed. "I ain't said nothin' to hurt you, have I?"

"No," he said. But he held her tightly to his chest, his head on her shoulder, so that she might not see the guilt in his eyes.

CHAPTER X.

Randerson continued his policy of not forcing himself upon Ruth. He went his way, silent, thoughtful, attending strictly to business. To Ruth, watching him when he came, the little kid in the house had grown more grim and stern looking since his coming to the Flying W.

She saw him, sometimes laughing quietly with Uncle Jepson; other times she heard him talking gently to Aunt Martha—with an expression that set her to wondering whether he were the same man that she had seen that day with the pistol in hand, shooting the life out of a fellow being. There were times when she wondered in her conviction of his heartlessness.

Since Ruth had announced her decision not to marry Masten until the fall round-up, she had not seen so much of him. He rode alone, sometimes not even asking her to accompany him.

Chavis, as was to be expected, had drawn his pay and left the Flying W. He did not leave the country, however, and satisfied his grudge against Randerson by drawing away two others of his men and annoying him with small depredations on the herd.

Knowing that the gentle owner of the ranch had forbidden any killing on her lands.

CHAPTER XI.

Randerson had been in no hurry to make an attempt to catch the rustlers whose depredations he had reported to Ruth. He had told the men to be doubly alert in their work, and he had hired two new men—from the Diamond H—to replace those who had left the Flying W. His surprise that they wanted to join Chavis had been correct, for the new men—whom he had put on special duty and had given permission to come and go when they pleased—had reported this fact to him.

He had seen little of Masten during the last two or three weeks. He rarely showed himself on the range now—so, Randerson's queries about him the men replied that they hadn't seen him. But Randerson was thinking very little about Masten as he rode through the brilliant sunshine this afternoon. He was going again to Catherston's to see Hagar.

Recollections of the change that had come over the girl were disquieting, and he wanted to talk to her again to determine whether she really had changed, or whether he had merely fancied it.

THE GUMPS—A TOUCHING LETTER FROM MOTHER

to a halt on a little knoll and looked about him. He had a good view of the cabin in the clearing, and he watched it long for signs of life. He saw no such signs.
He was about to ride on, when a sound reached his ears, and he drew reins tight on Patches and sat rigid.
Evidently Masten had likewise expected the horseman to be her father for at her exclamation he turned swiftly. His gaze met Randerson's, his shoulders sagged a little, his eyes wavered and shifted from the steady ones that watched him.
"You've strayed off your range," words in his throat, and he turned without protest, at Randerson's jerk of the head toward the ford, and walked without looking back, Randerson following on Patches.
He watched silently while Masten got on his horse, and then, still silent, he followed as Masten rode down the

Georgia Delegates Working For Mrs. Hays and Atlanta

BY LOUISE DOOLY,
Editor of the Woman's Department, Chautauque, N. Y., June 18.—While the sixteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs does not open its formal business sessions until Wednesday, many of the individual leaders have arrived and informal discussion among them indicates that the two main themes for consideration by the convention will be child welfare and citizenship.
The important issue under the first head will be the recent court decision that the child labor legislation which would control interstate commerce in goods made by child labor is unconstitutional. Whether the convention will vote to make this matter one to be worked on by the general federation through its department of legislation or delegated to the individual states is, of course, uncertain as yet.
The phase of citizenship which is considered of paramount importance, according to advance comment, is the education of the women in the duties of citizenship and its demand upon patriotism and in the fact that civics and politics are not necessarily identical, but that when citizenship duties involve participation in politics, then the duty of the women is to sacrifice, if necessary, their personal preference to remain aloof. The fact that a member of the Georgia delegation, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, is chairman of the division of citizenship training for the national organization means therefore that she will be a leader in some of the federation's most important deliberations.

Georgia Delegates Busy.

Mrs. James E. Hays, of Montezuma, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, presided at the first meeting Monday morning of the Georgia delegation to the biennial,
the meeting held at Hotel Atheneum, Georgia headquarters. The business was the appointment of committees and general plans for the campaign to elect Mrs. Hays corresponding secretary to the national organization and the bringing of the 1923 convention to Atlanta with the Atlanta Woman's club as the hostess organization. It is

Miss Middlebrooks Bride Of George Wesley Baskin

A marriage marked by beautiful simplicity was that of Miss Elizabeth Middlebrooks and George Wesley Bas-kin, which was quietly solemnized at 5 o'clock Monday, at the home of the bride on Gordon street in West End.
Rev. Robert L. Bell, pastor of the Pryor Street Presbyterian church, performed the impressive ring ceremony, in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives of the young couple. To the strains of Lohengrin's march, the bride party entered the drawing room, where the ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of stately palms and ferns, while on either side stood tall candelabra. During the ceremony, "I Love You Truly" was softly played by Mrs. O. T. Broyles, cousin of the bride.

Bridal Party.

Miss Lottie Leathers, maid of honor, was gowned in an elaborately beaded gown of American beauty canton crepe, worn with a large picture black hat. She carried a bou-quet of pink roses. Norton Bas-kin, brother of the groom, was best man. Little Sarah Frances Cook, niece of the bride, was the flower girl, and she wore a dainty gown of white crepe de chine. She carried a small basket of pink roses.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was lovely in a striking gown of midnight blue canton crepe and large picture hat. Her bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.
Mr. and Mrs. Baskin left immediately after the ceremony for a wedding trip to Alabama and upon their return will reside in Atlanta.

The charming young bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. Thomas Jefferson Middlebrooks, and is possessed of unusual charms, and is a popular member of the younger set. She is a graduate of the Girls' High school.

Mr. Baskin is the eldest son of Mr.
and Mrs. Thomas Underwood Baskin, of Union Springs, Ala.

bers of the Lambda Chi Alpha fran-ternity, are being entertained this week by Miss Edna Shepherd, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs.
W. E. Shepherd, of Madison, Ga. A lovely affair in honor of the guests

this home on Thursday evening. The typical summer garden with great clumps of hydrangea and other brightly tinted blooming plants of many varieties made an ideal setting for the party. A pleasant feature of the entertainment is the attendance each evening at the university commencement dances.

ris, Katherine Reese, Margaret Mc-Arthur, of Atlanta; Lucy Mower, of Knoxville, Tenn.; Jessie Mae Hatcher, of Columbus, Ga.; Celeste Fur-

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

There are two ways of being of help in this world.
One is by doing something.
The other is by being something.

Some people, of course, help both ways but that is too much to expect of everyone.

I have met a woman recently who seemed to me, at first, to in no way earn her place in the sun.

She is married but has no children. She does not keep house, does not sew, does not do any but the most casual of reading, does not do any social work, or club work, or philanthropic work. She does not even go in for society. She simply plays around with her friends, shops, chats over the telephone, goes downtown for afternoon tea, dines with her husband and then helps him foot away the evening.

Like a Parasite.

At first it seemed to me as if this woman was a thoroughgoing social parasite, taking everything and giving nothing. But as I grew to know her I found that she did give something.

Because she did not spend her energy in any way she was full of vitality and "pep," and because it was her natural disposition she was full of gaiety. And just by being this way she vitalized everyone with whom she came into contact.

Her husband adored her. He would

He sank back wearily in his chair when he came home from work and listen to her as she effervescence over some of her day's experiences. For a time he would say almost nothing. Then gradually he would seem to become recharged with energy from the battery of her vitality and he would begin to throw a word here and there into the conversation.

Appealed to Men.

Both men and women liked her. Her attraction for men was difficult to understand until I realized her charm, for she was not pretty, she had no figure at all, was not witty or fascinating. But she charmed them in the same way she did her husband by her vigor and her gaiety. She was always quick to laugh heartily at their feeblest jokes, she was always kind hearted and sympathetic, she was always ready to go anywhere or do anything—motor, walk, dance. And she was always happy. Never any cynicism, any mood of depression, any anxiety or irritability. Just happiness, gaiety and light heartedness.

Double Honors Due.

Of course the world could not afford too many of these people who do their share simply by being happy. But we do need some of them.

Oh at least, we need the happiness. If it can be combined with other gifts, so much the better. Even as I write I think of another woman who is just as full of pep and happiness as this first woman and who in addition does her share of the world's daily work, and on top of that is always doing public-spirited things.

She earns double honors, of course, but let's not forget to give some honors to the woman who helps by being happy.

The Involuntary Vamp by Mildred Barbour

Who's Who in the Story.

Diana Langley, who possesses to a superlative degree a quality of "furs" wished for her at birth by her youthful aunt, Marjorie Langley, herself a notable beauty, to whom Stephen Dale, a wealthy bachelor, had been devoted for years. Impetuously declares her love for Dale and being told by him that he can never marry because of a trace of insanity in his family, to which she is heir, she elopes with and marries Alex Zolch, a young navy officer, at the same time that Ted Saunders, a hopeless suitor for Diana's hand, marries Sylvia Benson, a friend of Diana's who is inclined to "cathartics." On her way to California with her new husband, Diana meets Lynn Johnson, an old acquaintance, and is suddenly left behind with him at a New Mexican town when the limited pulls out. They are picked up by a Spaniard, named Dominguez, who holds Johnson a prisoner and tries to force Diana to marry him. She falls into the clutches of another adventurer, and in leaving from a moving wagon, sustains a bad injury. She is picked up by Dr. Maxwell Borden, who, with his sister, Cynthia Borden, nurses her. Diana learns that her two benefactors were former social acquaintances of Stephen Dale in the east, and that there is a mystery concerning them. Dominguez finds Diana alone in the garden.

INSTALLMENT XLIV.

Diana whirled around to face Pedro Dominguez.

The handsome Spaniard, mounted on the horse she herself had ridden that memorable afternoon, was just outside the garden wall. His white teeth gleamed in a flashing smile under the jaunty little upturned mustache and his hold black eyes were mocking.

"Senorita, you do not know what you do to Dominguez! I have been desolate. You slip away from my humble abode, and I can find no trace. That was weeks ago and your affiance, Senor Johnston, he have been so ill!"

"The he's not dead! I was afraid!"

"You feared that harm would come to him through Dominguez, eh? Ah, Senorita, how you have misjudged! Why did you run away? Had I not asked you to be my wife? Could it have been that you feared me?"

Diana hesitated. It might not be wise to tell him of Lynn Johnson's warning, if the latter were still in his power. Perhaps, after all Johnston, and even she herself, had been wrong in assigning a sinister motive to Dominguez's hospitality. And yet the actions of the two Mexican servants would seem to bear out their theory.

As if divining the drift of her thoughts, Dominguez reached into his deep leather belt and drew out something which he handed to her.

"This is yours, Senorita. I found it in the possession of one of my servants," he gave a little crooked smile which unaccountably made Diana shiver. "He will have no further need for it. The servants of Pedro Dominguez do not steal twice from his guests."

It was the little roll of yellow-backed bills which Johnston had sent her.

Diana held it out to Dominguez.

"Please take it and give it to poor Mr. Johnston. He—he may need it when he is able to travel again, and have no use for it now. Some wonderfully kind people have taken me in, and when I am ready to go, I am quite sure they will loan me sufficient funds, if I have not got into communication with my family before that time."

But Dominguez waved aside her offer.

The Explanation.

"It will be my happiness to see that the affianced husband of the Senorita does not want for assistance. But how came you here, Senorita?"

In a few words, Diana told him of her adventures that night after leaving his house. She flushed and stammered a bit during the recital. It was not easy to tell him that she preferred to face the perils of the desert country rather than to remain a guest under his roof.

He listened gravely and made no comments, but when she related her encounter with the stranger in the ramshackle wagon, he questioned her sharply for an accurate description.

Satisfied, he nodded, and around his mouth crept the same little twisted smile with which he had hinted at the fate of the Mexican servant.

Diana felt as though a chill wind had blown across her from the hot skinned sands.

"You—you were very kind," she faltered, "and it was rude of me to leave in that manner. I think I must have been overwrought after the experience of the afternoon. And the country was all so new—and strange!"

He held up a graceful hand.

"Do not, I beg of you, Senorita! Do not make me an explanation for your going! It was enough for Dominguez to know that you had gone. Ah, a blow to the heart, indeed, Senorita! But this Doctor Borden and his good sister, are they kind to you?"

"Oh indeed, yes!" declared Diana warmly. "No one could take better care of me."

"But," Dominguez wheeled his horse nearer and lowered his voice, "Mystery, eh? Do you not feel it?"

Unwilling to discuss her benefactors with the Spaniard, Diana shook her head.

"I don't know what you mean."

He gave a glance. There was admiration in it too.

"For what you call a 'baby doll,' you are very clever, Senorita! Once you outwit Dominguez. What a pity to waste your cleverness on one so stupid as Senor Johnston!"

Diana was resentful of this criticism of a friend.

"He is not so stupid as you think, Senor," she said, remembering the smuggled note.

He shrugged his shoulders, and bending from his horse to bring his face closer to her own, he said softly:

"It will be my good fortune to save the Senorita from such a fate. I make again the proposal of marriage."

"You will not accept?"

"No," at her decided shake of the head. "Not now perhaps, but later, Senorita. Dominguez never change his mind. You go away, but what of it?"

He shrugged again. "I follow wherever you go and always I make my proposal. I ask your father, or your guardian maybe, to let me buy off Senor Johnston. We meet again soon, Senorita."

He turned his horse deftly and with a graceful wave of his sombrero, he was gone.

Diana stood staring after him. She was greatly perturbed.

If Dominguez carried out his threat to follow her back to civilization, what difficulties might she not encounter in explaining away an improvised fiancée to a bridegroom-husband?

And there was that affectionate note she had given Dominguez to deliver to Johnston! Suppose Dominguez had kept the note?

DRESS BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

One of the New Movements is to Own a Thick and a Thin Frock Which, When Combined, Make a Single Costume of Artistic Merit. Throughout the centuries there has been an effort to concentrate the decoration on an over-tunic worn with a thin under-tunic. Wherever there is a description of clothes of earlier eras there is always found this combination, this arrangement of double garments.

Egypt in its great days used the thin and thick combination of clothes and gloried in it. Caesar and his legions took the fashion to Britain. The big blonde Danes who attacked Britain wore these double garments. The Teuton races found in them the solution of keeping warm or cool.

Whenever the modern designers go back to this arrangement they are reaching downward to the beginning of history. Now and then they revive this antiquity of dress. Throughout the war they tried to persuade women to wear the cloth redingote over the silk underslip, you may remember.

They revived the Polonaise which a Polish princess brought to a French thin and thick combination of clothes and gloried in it. Caesar and his legions took the fashion to Britain. The big blonde Danes who attacked Britain wore these double garments. The Teuton races found in them the solution of keeping warm or cool.

Oklahoma Lady Had Not Been Well for a Year, and Regrets She Did Not Take Cardui Sooner.

Hinton, Okla.—"I feel greatly improved since taking Cardui, and I only regret I did not commence sooner," writes Mrs. George Curry, of Route 3, this place. Mrs. Curry says she had not been well in over a year when she began taking Cardui.

"I have suffered a great deal with nervousness, and this seemed to come from womanly weakness," she explained.

"I had headache. I was very weak and tired across my back.

"My limbs ached, and I did not feel like doing anything.

"I had the tired, draggy feeling and I suffered so.

"I would have bearing-down pains, first my hips and down each side.

"I suffered each month and would get so weak and worn out.

"Some told me of Cardui, and I began to use it. It did me a world of good. It took two bottles to make me know I was getting better, but by taking it regularly, I saw great improvement, and am now stronger.

"I owe my health to Cardui."

This well-known medicine, which Mrs. Curry mentions is a mild, medicinal, purely vegetable tonic, used with success for more than forty years in the treatment of many simple womanly ailments. Thousands of women have written that they were benefited by taking Cardui.

Woman's Place in Politics Discussed by Mrs. Lawson

Mrs. Frank Lawson, of Dublin, who has been elected as vice chairman of the twelfth district democratic executive committee, which makes her the first Georgia woman to be elevated to that political position.

Dublin, June 19.—Dublin is particularly gratified that the recent election of Mrs. Frank Lawson, of this city, as vice chairman of the Twelfth Democratic Executive committee elevates the first woman to that position in political affairs in Georgia. All middle Georgia is proud that the distinction comes to this section and that it should recognize such a brilliant woman as Mrs. Lawson. The honor is given a woman whom all Dublin and middle Georgia has learned to know and love for her graciousness and personal magnetism, and respected because of her unselfish, and outstanding work in civic matters and club work in this section.

Is Newspaper Woman.
First and foremost, Mrs. Lawson is a newspaper woman. She is the wife of the owner and editor of The Courier-Herald, of Dublin, and is herself an associate member of the League of American Pen Women. Her feature work and contributions to newspapers have been published and given prominence in practically all the leading papers of the south. She is really a versatile woman; dearly loves her home and family, the latter consisting of her husband and Augusta, her 9-year-old daughter; finds time to attend various meetings of clubs of which she is a member and to do considerable newspaper work.

Mrs. Lawson is a member of the State Executive Board of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; was president of the Twelfth District federation for six years; a member of the Woman's Study club; member John Laurens chapter, D. A. R.; chairman of Club House committee. At present she is chairman of the Press and Publicity committee of the state federation, composed of leading newspaper women of Georgia.

Mrs. Lawson's Interview.
The interview with Mrs. Lawson is given in the form of a statement made by her after a series of questions requested by the writer. It is as follows:

"The one great thing that stands out in the appointment of any woman as vice chairman of any congressional committee is the responsibility that goes with it. Truly we women have dreamed long enough and should now be able to rise and shoulder our own great tasks.

"I believe that there are really more 'thinking women' today than ever before. The time has passed when the average woman could be satisfied with a wonderful oratorical effort when she asked her representative a direct question in regard to some things that were very near her heart. Today is a day of facts and figures and women are well versed in them. If men could only remember to talk to us in their speeches. On the other hand, they either talk above, at, or beneath us, never to us. It always has the appearance of placing the woman at a great disadvantage. We do not like to be patronized. We do like to discuss things with a sympathetic understanding from the masculine side. It is not easy today for any representative either state or national to camouflage his answers, or get by with the assurance that such and such a bill will surely pass at the next session. The average woman knows that old story. We are in politics today because men have failed to pass those very bills pertaining to our home and our children. How many clubwomen over this entire country know just how much work and effort it took for the Shepherd-Towner bill.

Just last summer when our Georgia legislature was going to throw on the public dump heap the public welfare board of the state, who came to its rescue? The clubwomen of Georgia. They sent out an S. O. S. call over the entire state and with the help of the great Georgia press it was saved. Many women in this state could tell just how strong were the battles that have been fought in our halls of the legislature.

"It was when the laws that affected the woman directly in her home were not given her by the men, that the women of the state realized that the vote was necessary. The laws of Georgia and most southern states have always been unusually fair to our women. That, I believe, is one reason why the women of the south have been slow in regard to registering.

"Education to the average American woman has been more or less along practical lines. That is why she is fitted for the vote more than any other nation of women. I would urge the new voter to begin right at home to know her town, the wards and city officials. Visit the council meetings. Most mayors and councilmen will be delighted to have you as an onlooker or allow you to participate if one desires. This is certainly true in my home town. Let the city officials know that they have your sympathy and if things go wrong tell them about it.

"Then, when the new citizen is versed in her local politics, she will by this time (if she has not fallen by the wayside) become interested in her state politics. In due time she becomes versed in national affairs. Women are not going to achieve 100 per cent purity in politics, any more rapidly than the men have. I believe it will be a little surer when it comes.

"In closing this interview I would like to say that women representatives in state and national affairs will increase each year. I believe firmly that women understand always the human side of a question much better than the man. Women are asking today for a sympathetic interest and understanding in the questions that concern them.

"Women will bring to politics fresh, clean minds and will use them for the benefit of the best interests of their homes, towns, counties and states. Women are generally more unselfish than men.

"We have seen sometimes how the men have blundered around trying to get things right. A woman thinks on public matters as quickly as she does on private affairs.

"The most practical thing in the world is common sense and an understanding of humanity. It is the world's greatest need today."

Removes Hairy Growths Without Pain or Bother
(Modes of Today)

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths, for with a little delatone handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these beauty destroyers. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against disappointment, be careful to get real delatone. Mix fresh as wanted. (adv.)

In Seven-Day Non-Stop Run Ford makes 4,497 Miles over Roads in and around Fulton County

They call it a Dent—the car “that carries Wallace Reid

ACROSS THE CONTINENT

Is It a Ford—Or a Dent?
See This Thrilling Picture
At the Howard This Week

They call it a Dent. It is a speedy little sand-bed cutter, a car that cares naught for cloudbursts and muddy roads, that skips around dangerous mountain roads like a “house a-fire,” and darts through railroad tunnels just ahead of a locomotive with reckless abandon.

That's the car that Wallace Reid, as Jimmie Dent, uses to send chills up and down your back at the Howard theater this week, and when you see it you'll say—

“Why, that's a Ford!”

The press agents don't say a word about it being a John Henry flivver. Perhaps they can't. But you see the picture, and decide for yourself.

The Atlanta Ford dealers saw it—some of them—and they were so impressed with the capers of the “Tin Lizzie”—for that's what they call it in the various titles—that they decided to put on a seven-day non-stop run with a Ford, just to see how near like Wallace Reid their drivers could drive, and to see how much speed they could grind out of the roads in Fulton and DeKalb counties, and around about the city.

This contest was started last Monday a week ago, and finished Monday, the 19th. It was a sort of side-runner for Wallace Reid and his thrilling picture, “Across the Continent.” The race was a success. The Ford is now on exhibition in the lobby of the Howard.

But about this Wallace Reid picture—this Paramount thriller.

It furnishes excitement and suspense and romance enough to last the most exacting motorist for many moons.

John Dent is the big manufacturer of Dent cars. They are the poor man's friend. He requires all his employees who are able to own a car to drive a Dent. His son, Jimmie (that's Wallace), is too proud to drive one. He buys a handsome car, made by a crooked competitor, and being in love with the daughter of this rival, he joins the father and daughter in a trip across the country.

This car has previously held the world's record, but John Dent is determined to beat that record with a Dent on a trip from the east to the western coast. In a previous attempt to lower this record, the maker of the big car has thrown many obstacles in the way, wrecking the Dent and putting it out of the running.

Jimmie gets on to this game, and shakes the rival and his daughter and returns home to put on a great transcontinental race, in which he buys a noted car to drive himself. His father is determined to enter a Dent. Three minutes before the race starts it is discovered that the Dent driver is fixing to “double-cross” old man Dent. Jimmie comes to the rescue. He withdraws his car and consents to drive his father's little Dent.

Here is where the fun and the thrills start. For more than half way across the continent, Jimmie and his father are away in the rear. Finally the western hills loom up, then sand bars are to be bored through. Cloudbursts descend, roads are knee-deep in mud. Here is where the little Dent comes into its own. Slowly it begins to gain on all the other cars. The rival finds he is to be beaten, and again tries the trick of obstructing the road. But Jimmie has been put wise by his sweetheart, who is the old man's secretary, and who has followed the course by rail, and she takes the place of Jimmie's mechanic on the last 30 miles, and after dashing through a railroad tunnel, bumping along fifty miles an hour on cross-ties, and shooting out just ahead of a locomotive, Jimmie wins out with the Dent.

The picture is interesting from start to finish, and it seems to be so evident as to what car Wallace Reid is driving that it was no stretch of the imagination for Ford dealers in this city to hook up an interest in Ford run as a sort of side-kick to the picture.

A good cast supports Mr. Reid, chief among them being Mary Mc-

This little Ford made nearly 4,500 miles in a special continuous run just completed in and around Atlanta.

Laren, leading woman, who finishes the last lap as the mechanic with the star. Formerly private secretary to Mr. Dent, she now declares that she believes she had rather stick to the racing game.

Others in the cast are Betty Francisco, Walter Long, Lucien Littlefield, Jack Herbert, Guy Oliver and Sidney D'Albrook.

The musical program for the week is as follows: The prologue, “The Garden of Venice,” a cornet solo by Perry Bremer. The overture, “My Hero,” from the Chocolate Soldier, and a short scene “Sunshine and Shadows” complete this beautiful program.

Seven-Day Non-Stop Run Ended Successfully Monday; Ford Traveled 4,497 Miles

At 12 o'clock Monday the Ford car which started out one week ago from the Howard theater on a non-stop run for one week, rolled up in front of this theater apparently just as eager for another start as it was seven days ago. For seven days and nights—168 consecutive hours—this car had spanned over the roads of Fulton and DeKalb counties and through the streets of Atlanta without a single stop of its motor.

It had covered 4,497 miles.

The special run was arranged in connection with a Paramount picture showing this week at the Howard theater, in which Wallace Reid makes a flying dash “Across the Continent” in what the screen says is a Dent car. But its close resemblance, both in looks and actions, to the well-known Ford, caused the authorized Ford dealers of this city to put on a seven-day non-stop run, merely to see how a Ford around Atlanta would compare in speed and mileage to the one Wallace Reid uses in the picture.

The comparison was good. When you go to see the picture you will see the Ford car sitting in the lobby of the theater.

Here are just a few records made by this Ford in this successful non-stop run: It ran 4,497 miles without a stop of the motor.

It used 213 gallons of Reed Wonder gas, getting an average of 21.1-10 miles per gallon.

The average running time was 27 miles per hour.

It finished the course with the same Goodrich tires it started with, and had not the slightest tire trouble. One or two punctures from tacks halted the driving for only a few minutes, but not the slightest weakness was developed in the tires.

Ninety cents' worth of repairs was all that was needed in this nearly 4,500 miles' run.

The authorized Ford dealers of Atlanta sponsored the run, furnished the drivers. These worked in relays of eight hours each, the little car being kept on the jump every minute except when taking gas. The drivers were Gordon Dukes, of the Beaudry Motor Co.; G. R. Brown, of Belle Isle, and J. Coy Williams, of Freeman's. These drivers stuck to their tasks manfully, each getting about the same amount of mileage and gas consumption on the week's run.

All the drivers were loud in their praise of the Reed Wonder gas and Liberty oils used, these being exclusively used and furnished by the Reed Oil Co. The average of more than 21 miles per gallon testifies to the efficiency and economy of the Reed stations' service.

The Goodrich tires used were the regular standard factory equipment, the car being a stock car. The fact that not a blemish or weakness appeared and the tires hardly showed

4,497 Miles in Seven Days on Goodrich Tires Without the Slightest Tire Trouble

The Ford Touring Car, used to make this remarkable record for tire endurance, was equipped with Goodrich Fabric Tires, used as standard factory equipment.

Seven days and nights—168 hours—continual grueling grind, without a stop except for gasoline and to change drivers, with an average speed of 27 miles per hour, failed to develop a single weakness in Goodrich Tires.

The great difference in heat and abuse which Goodrich Tires were subjected to on this seven-day, non-stop run leaves a wide margin of safety in favor of the average user.

Dewey Marshall Beaten By Hustling Travelers; Last Game Listed Today

Cracker Outfielders Present Kidmen First
Two Runs, but Three Are Earned,
Johnson Pulls Good Umpiring.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Mr. Kid Elberfeld was brought up in a school of baseball where "nothing risked, nothing gained" was the first lesson taught. Mr. Elberfeld has remembered that lesson and is teaching it at present to a class of extremely ambitious youngsters, and usually to the complete destruction of their older opponents.

The system brought a pennant in 1920 and came mighty near repeating the next campaign. It brought the Kid a victory yesterday at Ponce de Leon and is likely to bring him many more before the curtain rings down.

The Little Rock Travelers are strong believers in advancing their runners, and when a break does come it generally proves costly to their opposition. Some bad turns were encountered yesterday by Dewey Marshall, whose right hand was nipped against the southpaw flinging of Cy Warmoth. And the breaks gave the Travelers their second win in the three game already completed in the present series, the count being 5-2.

First Were Gifts.

The first runs of these hustling visitors were gifts, but the fact stands that the last resulted from baseball which is of the variety tended to break the backs of the most persistent enemies. Two were scored because the Kid saw opportunities to pull the unexpected and proceeded to do it, while the other came from hitting at just the moment the blow was needed. The series stands 2-1 for Little Rock, the last game to be played today.

The Travelers should never have been permitted to take the lead in the second inning, when they showed over a couple of counters and were never headed. The break they seized was an unardonable mistake by Cracker outfielders.

All the trouble started in that frame after Connolly and Lapan had been easy outs. Barrett drew a base on balls and Wano promptly doubled to center, Barrett drawing up to center. Corrigan, who has been nice picking for Atlanta pitchers during this series, lifted weekly directly back of short. Hock and Mayer raced toward the ball and either could have handled it easily had the other given way. Both stopped, the ball falling safely, though Mayer made a dying effort to complete the catch. Barrett and Wano scored.

The Cracker has a habit of fighting back when the tide gets to running against them and in their half of the second regained half of the ground lost during the attack of the Travelers.

Mayer drew one of the four bases on balls Warmoth issued during the day to start the inning. Bernsen, who seems to be slowly recovering the batting eye that made him such a terror in the league last season, bunched his first of two singles to center and Mayer stopped at third. Fred Graff then shot a sacrifice fly to left and Mayer scored. Bernsen sticking close to first, Warmoth was out, but Bernsen sent the fans buzzing when he executed a hook slide in eluding Jackson for the first Cracker stolen base of the festivities. Ritter was an infield out to stop the rally.

Another Attack.

The chance-taking of the Kidmen was begun in the fourth and the two runners laid their spikes in the home station. Connolly, who had considerable trouble in fathoming Marshall's mixtures, struck out, but Lapan hit safely to center. The cue was for Barrett to try to hammer the pellet out of the park, but the Kid figured that a punt would take the Cracker by surprise. It did, Marshall bobbing the roller, while Lapan went to second and Barrett to first.

Chief Wano, the only batter to maintain a thousand percentage, with three hits in three official attempts, deposited a single in the right pasture and Lapan scored easily, Barrett reaching third.

The Cracker knew what was coming. It was Elberfeld strategy to order the squeeze play and it worked when Corrigan bunted down the first base line. Bernsen getting the ball just in time to tag the little Traveler second sacker, Barrett crossing with the second tally of the frame.

The Cracker tried valiantly in the fifth, after Dewey Marshall shocked the opposition and the customers by doubling to the scoreboard. Hock followed by beating out a bunt, sending Marshall to third, and Klugman failed in the pinch.

In the sixth, however, the locals did cut the margin a bit, shoving over one run. Guyon drew a base on balls and stole second after Mayer had struck out and Wano had handled nicely Bernsen's long fly. Fred Graff singled to left and Guyon scored.

Another for the Kid.

The blow which telled the Cracker for keeps was delivered in the eighth inning. Marshall's wildness providing the opening the Kidmen were seeking. Hock, first up, and Schiebner advanced with a sacrifice. Connolly was tossed out on a good play by Klugman Jackson reaching third.

QUALIFYING ROUND IN SOUTHERN AMATEUR TODAY

Sixty-Four Golfers Will Qualify for Play; First Thirty-Two Play for Title

Mike Thomas, Nashville Southpaw, and T. J. White Tee Off This Morning at 8:30 o'Clock

BY MIKE THOMAS.

This morning at 8:30 o'clock the first pair of golfers will tee off for the qualifying round in the Southern Amateur golf championship tournament at East Lake, and until Saturday afternoon this great course will be the scene of some of the greatest golf that has ever been seen in the south.

The qualifying round today will cut the large field to 64 golfers, who will be divided into two divisions of 32 each on basis of their scores in the qualifying round and the first division will play for the southern amateur title and the George W. Adair trophy.

The course is in wonderful condition. The greens are almost perfect and the fairways are in such shape that long and uncontrolled rolls will be eliminated after the hard rain of Sunday afternoon. Scott Hudson stated that the course was in better condition than at any previous time, and that while there were one or two greens that were not as smooth as might be, still they were true and that putts hit properly would not be deflected by some uneven agency.

Joe Carroll, the greens-keeper, has been putting in some long and arduous hours in getting the course in condition and his handiwork has revealed itself in its results on the course. Another thing about the course that will interest all golfers—the rough is "rough" and it looks just that way.

H. F. Smith president of the Southern Golf association said yesterday that from the condition of the course and the quality and the number of the golfers entered, he figured this would be by far the most successful event the southern association had ever sponsored. One hundred and thirty-eight golfers had entered the tournament yesterday evening and W. C. Sherwood, who has charge of the tournament, said that he figured there would be in the neighborhood of 100 entrants by the time the entry list actually closed.

Much Golf Yesterday. Practically every entrant in the tournament took advantage of the perfect golfing weather yesterday to get out and make a few experiments with the course and his clubs. There were no remarkable scores reported, although a great many of the visitors broke 80. From the talk in the locker room and the clubhouse the lowest score that was turned yesterday was Bob Jones' 71.

Bob's card:
Out 4 3 4 5 3 4 3 5—36
Jones 4 3 5 4 4 3 4 3—35
In 4 3 4 5 3 4 3 5—36
Par 4 3 4 5 3 4 3 5—36
Jones 4 3 5 4 4 3 4 3—35
Bob during his round was not shooting what looked to be great golf and for him this score was a couple of strokes worse than he really expected. He was fairly well satisfied with his score on the back side, but his 38 on the first nine seemed to be somewhat of a crime from his personal standpoint when the match was finished.

Jack Wenzler, who was runner-up to Perry Adair in the last southern amateur held at Belle Meade in Nashville, played in the same foursome with Bob, but he had one or two bad holes that threw his score off several strokes.

The man with the best score in this foursome was a professional from Memphis, Scobie. He shot a 35 going out and a 34 coming in. This was the most sensational round of the day.

Another Youth Phenom. Archie Reeves, of Selma, Ala., who is just about the same age as Bob Jones was when he first attracted attention in a national tournament, has entered the event and it was this correspondent's pleasure to see this youngster play several holes yesterday. He has good form and while no one of his shots are extraordinarily long, he was well down in the eighties yesterday. His showing in the tournament will without question surprise the gallery before play is finished.

Reeves will vie with the youngest of the Jones entires for the attraction of those who want to see the youngsters of the south develop into real golfing talent to take the place that was held by Perry Adair and Bob Jones as juvenile phenoms, now that these two worthies have passed the biggest milestone in a youngster's life. It would not be at all surprising if these two youngsters survive the qualifying round that will cut the field to 64 golfers.

Who Will Win? The qualifying round which will start today will be a battle royal for the first honors that the southern will produce. And speaking of low medals and low medalists this correspondent saw the southern amateur low qualifying medal which was won by R. H. Baugh, of Birmingham, in 1902. His score for this honor was 136—and before you wonder how in the world he got away with it we might add that they played 36-hole qualifying rounds in those days.

Mr. Baugh stated that he had designs on one of the senior event prizes in making the trip to this tournament, while his son would try and make it interesting for the younger element.

Bob Jones is favored to win the qualifying round, because Bob can hover around the upper sixties and the low seventies, and since in addition to the golf that he is able to shoot anywhere, he is playing on his own course. If Bob breaks 70 today, which is entirely within the bounds of possibilities, and we might add probabilities, he is pretty sure to walk off with the low medal.

There are other golfers, who if they are at the top of their game, will give Little Bob a mighty close race for the honor.

Rules for Tournament. The rules of the United States Golf association will apply in this section of battle. The association has approved the rulings of this section in the following points:
(a) When it is necessary to move a ball from an unplayable lie—two strokes.
(b) When it is necessary to move a ball from an unplayable lie—two strokes.

These rulings have the approval of the U. S. G. A. for play in this section—and will apply in this tournament.

Stymies WILL BE PLAYED. There has been a question as to the stymie proposition and there have been changes and counter changes and reversals and everything—but in this tournament will be played. This ruling has the approval of all the golfers—and it comes up to the principle of the royal and ancient game.

There is one other thing that may be done. A ball may be classed on the green. This, however, does not apply anywhere else—the ball must be played as it lies or a two-stroke penalty will be taken.

The Invitation Tournament. The invitation tournament that is being run at Druid Hills is attracting a great deal of interest and this event will make it possible for the visiting, as well as the local golfers who have entered the southern amateur to play golf even though they have the misfortune to fail to place in the first 64 in the East Lake event.

CORN AND WHEAT

PRICES DECLINE

Chicago, June 19.—With harvesting widespread and weather auspicious, the selling side had the advantage today in the wheat market. Prices closed heavy, 13-8 to 17-8 net lower, July 130 1/2, 130 3/8, and September 110 3/4.

10 to 12 A-8's, and separate flights of 10 to 12 A-1's. Conditions improved to 1-2:1 down to 1-1:1. Conditions were unchanged to 8-8 at 1-2:1 higher; provisions unchanged to 12:1 up.

Rapid progress in harvest operations was made evident by reports from a great part of the winter crop belt.

New wheat was being received at St. Louis and threshing was going on in Illinois. Nebraska also sent word that cutting of wheat had begun. Big arrivals at Kansas City, 473 carsload, tended further to weaken the market here, an inference being drawn that the carry over of old wheat in the country exceeded what most traders supposed.

Aggressive buying developed in the wheat market and exporters and millers seemed to be pulling back from any attempt to produce a sharp hand-to-mouth basis. Larger volume shipments than during the previous week had something of a bearish effect. However, likewise a decline in sterling exchange. Uncertain quotations were at nearly the lowest level of the day, no stimulus appearing to follow.

unshockingly of a liberal decrease of a whole supply.

Corn went lower with wheat and as a result of an unexpected enlargement of the visible supply. Oats, however, were lifted a trifle owing to a favorable crop report.

Changes in hog values governed the provision market.

GRAIN MEN UNITE SELLING FORCES

Chicago, June 19.—(Co-operation between the committee of the midwestern farm bureau and the officers of the United States Grain growers, incorporated, was announced today as the latest detail of the grain-growers' selling plan. Under the plan the organization will attempt to acquire sales contracts for grain from the growers on the Chicago and Minneapolis grain exchanges, and will also make sales contracts with consumers.

Sales officers to handle grain through the exchanges will be only a part of the selling plan, C. H. Gustafson, president of the Grain Growers', said. Financing arrangements for a million dollars or more to cover grain movements, whether the grain is handled through the sales company with grain exchange membership or sold direct to consumers, have been made, Mr. Gustafson said.

These arrangements include negotiations for $50,000 from B. F. Hales, a Chicago farmer-business man, as announced by the Associated Press.

Loew's Vaudeville.
(At the Grand.)
Johnny Morris and Edna Towne captured the honors for popularity on Monday night at Loew's Grand theater on the vaudeville bill for the week. A Fool for Two Minutes, nothing but pure nonsense, with Johnny Morris as the fool. He is an eccentric comedian of the 22nd degree and easily keeps the house in laughter with his foolish chatter and funny falls. Together with Miss Towne they burlesque several popular songs in a most humorous manner.

play attraction at the Rialto theater all this week, featuring Priscilla Dean. For nine years Wallace and Noah Berry, brothers and screen villains, have wanted to play together. They have tried time and time again to get engagements at the same studio, even if it meant the same picture. They had given up hope of ever getting in the same picture. But "Wild Honey," Cynthia Stockley's famous book, upon which the photoplay is based, has afforded an opportunity for them in the same picture. One as a rough-hewn upstart in English society; the other as a feckless stage driver and thug in the transatlantic.

NAVY MONEY BILL PASSED IN SENATE

Vain Move to Withdraw Marines From Haiti, San Domingo and Nicaragua Features Debate.

Washington, June 19.—The annual naval appropriation bill carrying approximately $295,450,000 and providing for an enlisted personnel of 86,000 men, was passed late today by the senate and sent to conference with the house.

Action on the enlisted personnel, now about 115,000, is final as the senate accepted the house decision and the question will not come before the conferees, who will deal principally with senate increases of about $44,000,000 over the house bill. No effort was made to reduce the enlisted personnel.

Unsuccessful efforts to end American occupation of Haiti, the Dominican republic and Nicaragua, and to launch a congressional investigation of navy administration, marked the final day of debate. An amendment by Senator King, democrat, Utah, providing for withdrawal of American marines from the two republics and Nicaragua, December 31, next, was rejected, 42 to 9, after lengthy debate in which the American policy of intervention was both attacked and defended.

"Sisters."
(At the Metropolitan.)
"Sisters," the attraction at the Metropolitan this week, is a story of love and hate, of passion and revenge. Kathleen Norris wrote it; Albert Capellani directed it and an excellent group of players interpret the roles. From the moment the story opens the threads of interest begin to weave and the web is one of remarkable coherence.

"Sisters" is a human, appealing story, the better because it offers a sane solution to a problem as old as the ages; it discloses human frailties and it likewise brings into shining relief the best that is in the human heart, and just because it is going to like it.

"Wild Honey."

South Africa, the fortune hunters' country, where romance is rife and the very air is filled with the spirit of adventure, is the background for the vivid dramatic action, the photo-

BOY BADLY HURT WHEN HIT BY CAR
Dwurd Gerson, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gerson, of 406 South Pryor street, suffered severe bruises about the body when he was run over by an automobile driven by A. E. Vaughn, 10 West street, at Crumley and Pryor streets, shortly after 5 o'clock Monday evening.

The boy was taken to Grady hospital, where his injuries were found to be of a lacerated scalp and body bruises.

Charges of reckless driving were cocked against Mr. Vaughn, who immediately fled from the scene. The child, apparently not seeing the automobile, was going south on Pryor street, ran directly in front of it and was struck, Vaughn declared.

CANADIANS FETING ATLANTA SHRINERS
BY LEO G. BALDWIN.
Vancouver, British Columbia, June 19.—(Special.)—Such a scene as was accorded us in San Francisco during the annual Shrine meeting was tendered the 325 members of Yaarab's delegation in this city Monday. Upon their arrival at 8 o'clock Sunday night, a few minutes before departure for this afternoon, the entire populace of this city, including members of Gizez Shrine club, have feted us and made us feel like the most honored guests in the city.

Monday morning a big parade of Yaarab's uniformed drill team and band was staged about the principal streets of the city. Following the parade the delegation was taken on an automobile ride over the city. The reception we are meeting with from the Canadian Shriners is wonderful. The party leaves in the afternoon for Kamloops, where we will stop over for several hours. Everybody happy and in good health.

Forsyth Players Please In "My Lady Friends"
The Forsyth Players took "My Lady Friends" last night as another means of proving that they are capable, at any time, of so fitting themselves into the roles provided by a clever comedy as to completely please their audiences.

The main reason for the success this excellent company enjoyed last night hinges on the fact that Creighton Hale was again cast in one of those parts for which he was undoubtedly designed when he began to be constructed along Thespian lines. Hale can be flustered more satisfactorily and more gracefully than any actor this town has seen in some time—and the vehicle Monday night was dependent on that ability to appear embarrassed.

Proof that the show itself deserved sound praise without any useless verbal adornment lies in the fact that this review has stumbled into the third paragraph without mentioning the fact that Atlantans had the opportunity of seeing two of her native daughters perform—delightfully. Miss Nora Strang and Miss Faith Dorsey (Mary Smith Vow) were well-placed in the cast and would have merited the applause given them if they had been from Ypsilanti, Mich., and Oskosh, Wis., respectively. Miss Dorsey has been seen and liked before with the Forsyth Players, but this is the first time the audience had a chance to be glad that Miss Strang's vacation visit home was so timely.

Supporting Mr. Hale in his fine portrayal of the well-meaning, but somewhat waded in much hot water, were Ruth Robinson, as his wife; Franklyn Munroe, as his advisor and companion in temporary misery; Mary Terry, delightful as usual in her ingenue part with Robert Craig, as a younger juvenile than is his wont; and the rest of the company, all of whom have been playing with her usual finesse and sincerity.

Bridget, a culinary behemoth, was listed on the programs as "???", but if the writer mistakes not, the reader can find the identity by supplying in the missing letter or letters in the following: A. S. By—on.

The answer is the name of an actor who has played the part of a culinary several times. No prizes.

The comedy itself is filled with breezy lines and an abundance of action. Probably the best thing the troupe has done since their arrival in the city and you have your own notion about what that means.

PAUL WARWICK.

courts in other states was said to be counted in the house judiciary committee, apparently on account of labor's protest against it. Four bills as anti-secession measures were said by the committee to be aimed at preventing the normal activities of labor, and the committee reported that the vigilance of the officers of the federation had prevented any progress being made toward enactment of these measures. The committee's report on all the measures was approved by the convention.

Co-operation between organized labor and the farmers in behalf of legislation was urged by the legislative committee and the committee approved such a policy.

NO INDICTMENTS NOW PROBABLE IN "PIE" PROBE
Indictments against solicitors for the republican educational fund probably will not be asked in the pending federal grand jury investigation, District Attorney Clint W. Hager stated Monday.

Instead the jurors may be asked merely to formulate recommendations of some nature at the conclusion of the inquiry, District Attorney Hager said.

Several witnesses were questioned at length Monday with reference to the manner in which they had been solicited for contributions to the republican educational society. The nature of their disclosures could not be learned.

A great number of rural carriers, postmasters and others in the federal service in Georgia were on hand to testify. The inquiry will be resumed Tuesday morning.

Instead the jurors may be asked merely to formulate recommendations of some nature at the conclusion of the inquiry, District Attorney Hager said.

Several witnesses were questioned at length Monday with reference to the manner in which they had been solicited for contributions to the republican educational society. The nature of their disclosures could not be learned.

A great number of rural carriers, postmasters and others in the federal service in Georgia were on hand to testify. The inquiry will be resumed Tuesday morning.

BOY BADLY HURT WHEN HIT BY CAR
Dwurd Gerson, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Gerson, of 406 South Pryor street, suffered severe bruises about the body when he was run over by an automobile driven by A. E. Vaughn, 10 West street, at Crumley and Pryor streets, shortly after 5 o'clock Monday evening.

The boy was taken to Grady hospital, where his injuries were found to be of a lacerated scalp and body bruises.

Charges of reckless driving were cocked against Mr. Vaughn, who immediately fled from the scene. The child, apparently not seeing the automobile, was going south on Pryor street, ran directly in front of it and was struck, Vaughn declared.

CANADIANS FETING ATLANTA SHRINERS
BY LEO G. BALDWIN.
Vancouver, British Columbia, June 19.—(Special.)—Such a scene as was accorded us in San Francisco during the annual Shrine meeting was tendered the 325 members of Yaarab's delegation in this city Monday. Upon their arrival at 8 o'clock Sunday night, a few minutes before departure for this afternoon, the entire populace of this city, including members of Gizez Shrine club, have feted us and made us feel like the most honored guests in the city.

Monday morning a big parade of Yaarab's uniformed drill team and band was staged about the principal streets of the city. Following the parade the delegation was taken on an automobile ride over the city. The reception we are meeting with from the Canadian Shriners is wonderful. The party leaves in the afternoon for Kamloops, where we will stop over for several hours. Everybody happy and in good health.

Cannot Be Masons And Klansmen Both, Warns Grand Master
New York, June 19.—Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Thompson, grand master of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New York state in a statement made public today denounced the Ku Klux Klan and warned members of the Masonic fraternity that they cannot be both Masons and members of the K. K. K.

LABOR UNANIMOUS AGAINST SALES TAX

courts in other states was said to be counted in the house judiciary committee, apparently on account of labor's protest against it. Four bills as anti-secession measures were said by the committee to be aimed at preventing the normal activities of labor, and the committee reported that the vigilance of the officers of the federation had prevented any progress being made toward enactment of these measures. The committee's report on all the measures was approved by the convention.

Co-operation between organized labor and the farmers in behalf of legislation was urged by the legislative committee and the committee approved such a policy.

Indictments against solicitors for the republican educational fund probably will not be asked in the pending federal grand jury investigation, District Attorney Clint W. Hager stated Monday.

After assuring the capital of the terms were satisfactory, the agent hurried back to New York and reported to Appleby. A hurried conference of the prohibition force followed, but it was decided nothing could be done except to guard the coast.

Appleby declared that rum runners are finding it increasingly difficult to land their stuff.
